Veterans Are Indignant at the Mitchell Report That Bonus Marchers Were Criminals

Other Details, Pages 2, 4, 5

Portland, Ore., Sept. 12 (INS)—An army of World War veterans, bitterly resenting what they believed was President Hoover's unwarranted attack on the B. E. F. assembled here for the opening today of the American Legion's fourteenth annual convention.

The President's "explanation" of the use of armed federal troops in expelling the bonus marchers from Washington stirred up the Legion more than any other utterance within memory.

FRIENDS STUNNED

If stunned the President's friends, his political allies and the independent leaders who confidently expected to steam-roller into obedience any attempt to put the Legion on record as censuring the President for the troop movement.

Among others, Ray Fields, prominent Oklahoma attorney and a candidate for national commander declared it one of the most inhuman blunders ever committed by a president. His whole delegation was aroused against the President.

The same sentiment pervaded the Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Texas delegations. Congressman Wright Patman of Texas, who led the cash bonus fight in Congress, also condemned the President in vigorous terms.

One of the Oregon leaders—a Republican high in party councils—expressed the situation in these words:

"We had the censure resolution blocked in committee. A number of Democrats were going to help us.

"But now the President has opened fire on our buddies, we won't be able to hold them in line. It looks like the President has provoked exactly what he hoped to avert."

HURLEY IS PRESENT

One member of the President's official family, Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, is attending the convention. He announced he had not been invited to make an address and declined to say whether he would speak if invited.

The convention opened this morning, with many distinguished guests, and only a routine program ahead. Tomorrow, the Legion parades. On Wednesday, it will vote upon censuring Mr. Hoover, involving the cash bonus, the national defense issue and possibly prohibition. It elects a new National Commander Thursday.

ASK NO FAVORS

Fighting men in the World War "asked no favors" and "they ask none now," Josephus Daniels, wartime secretary of the avy, told the convention today.

"More than that," he added, "they wish all administrative policies, which have been justly criticized, repealed and discontinued to the end that this generous nation's policy to the veterans will not be tainted by either extravagance or favoritism."

Bern's Will May Solve Mystery

Hollywood, Sept. 12 (INS)—Plans were made today to open Paul Bern's safety deposit box and produce his second will, which may contain information which would clear up some of the mystery surrounding the film executive's ended his life.

Attorneys for Bern's widow, Jean Harlow, planned to file the will for probate.

Miss Harlow is made chief beneficiary in the will, with provisions also being made for Miss Irene Harrison, Bern's secretary for six years, friends understood.

LINKED BY LETTERS

Letters from Bern to Dorothy Millette, missing "other woman" in his life, were found in her effects, but filled only a few pages.

Miss was expected with the probable opening today of Bern's last will and the promise of a statement from Mendel Silbergerg, attorney for Miss Harlow.

Sacramento and San Francisco authorities sought Miss Millette or her body. She was believed drowned either in the Sacramento River between the two cities, herself a suicide, or if still alive, to be fleeing from possible recognition.

LINKED BY LETTERS

Bern and Miss Millette were definitely linked in four letters found as police opened baggage left in a San Francisco hotel from which the woman checked out the day after the producer's death. She vanished that night or the following morning from the river steamer Delta King en route to Sacramento.

The letters revealed Bern had been solicitous for Miss Millette's welfare and was interested in supplying her with funds. He sent "love and best wishes" in a letter

REICH SPURNS DECREE TO DISSOLVE

Instead, Passes Vote of Non-Confidence in Von Papen's Ministry; Clashes Feared

Berlin, Sept. 12 (INS)—The most bitter political war in the history of the 13-year-old German republic was launched by the Reichstag this afternoon amid unprecedented scenes.

To avert defeat on a Communistic motion of non-confidence, Chancellor Von Papen announced the dissolution of the Reichstag and with all members of his cabinet instantly left the house.

Ignoring the dissolution announcement, Count Hermin Thorling, newly elected Fascist president of the Reichstag, directed the House to ballot on the non-confidence motion which was carried, 513 to 32.

The situation immediately after the Reichstag adjourned was not clear, but Goering ordered the deputies to disregard the dissolution announcement and to reassemble at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Von Papen, on the other hand, intends to ignore the vote of non-confidence and continue in office wit hhis cabinet, it was authoritatively stated, counting upon the support of President Von Hindenburg and the republican army.

Whether the Hitler Fascists, the dominating body in the Reichstag, will call upon their brown-shirted militia to attempt to oust Von Papen, making certain an armed clash and possible civil war, could not be determined this afternoon.

Only Genuine Americanism Can Restore Prosperity, Says W. R. Hearst

THE daily news reports in all papers, Republican and Democratic, show exactly how Hoover prosperity—the 'round the corner kind—is operating.

Stocks are going up and wages are going down.

Railroad statements continue very discouraging, but railroad stocks have risen on the stock exchange.

And while the railroad stocks increase in speculative value the wages of railroad employes are being cut at this very day and hour.

The railroads have been especially favored by the government. They have been allowed to raise rates. They have been allowed to effect combinations more or less menacing to shippers.

If there is any Republican prosperity anywhere, either here or around the corner, the railroads ought to be enjoying it.

But the railroads feel compelled to make a second cut in wages, making the total cut 20 per cent.

* * *

WHAT has become of the billions supplied by the government through the Federal Reconstruction Corporation to the various banks?

Why are not those billions being used to better effect in helping industry and stimulating business activity?

The truth is the banks are not using this money for the extension of industry and the increase of employment.

They are using it to buy securities and to balloon the market.

As a matter of unfortunate fact, the banks have called loans instead of extending them and the consequences of this policy of contraction have been to compel those who owe the banks money to raise the money by throwing their securities on the market at any price.

That procedure accounts for the appallingly low levels to which sound interest bearing securities recently sank.

Then when securities were low enough the banks stepped in and with the money supplied to them by the government through the Federal Reconstruction Corporation proceeded to buy up those securities which their policy of contracting credit had forced their debtors to sacrifice at a fraction of their value.

* * *

NATURALLY the big bankers are grateful to an administration which supplies them with money with which to speculate so securely and so profitably.

These Wall Street gentlemen point to the rise in stock prices and declare that this is an indication of reviving prosperity and a reason for retaining Mr. Hoover, the apostle of around the corner prosperity, in power.

Then what kind of an indication is the increased number of men out of employment, and what kind of indications are the general 20 per cent pay cut of the railroads and other wage reductions throughout the country?

What kind of prosperity do these sad conditions indicate?

Is that a genuine American prosperity which

LOVE BLONDE SOUGHT IN PLYMOUTH KILLING

Police Drag Pond and Dig Under Du Bois' Cottage in the Hunt for His Mate's Body

While police today wove a net of circumstantial evidence around Charles DuBois, widely known and wealthy jeweler, charged with the murder of his wife, Edith, the Boston Evening American learned that a love letter from a blonde, whom he planned to marry, led directly to his arrest.

The affectionate missive, referring to the removal of all obstacles to the marriage, was found, it was learned, in the DuBois summer cottage at Plymouth.

Other developments in the murder mystery, centering at Plymouth, where DuBois was arrested last night, but with ramifications in Boston, Braintree, New York and Montreal, were:

1—Search in Great Herring Pond, Plymouth, and under the basement floor in the cottage for the body of Mrs. DuBois, which has not been located despite the fact that police claim sufficient "secret information" to charge the man with murder.

2—Disclosure that a wealthy Braintree couple, performing detective work on their own initiative, allegedly disproved DuBois' story that his wife was killed in a Montreal auto accident and her body cremated.

3—Grilling of a Braintree man who gave out to Braintree and Quincy newspapers the husband's story of the accident and cremation, late last month, after Mrs. DuBois disappeared.

4—Appeal to the mysterious blonde, known only as "Grace," by Asst. Dist. Atty. John Sullivan of Plymouth County, through the Boston Evening American, urging her to come forward with vital information.

5—Discovery that "Grace" not only has been at the Plymouth cottage with DuBois since his wife vanished, but has also been with him in Tuckahoe, N. Y., where he also had an apartment.

6—Former business associates of DuBois in Boston reveal details of his past life when he was prominent as a jewelry salesman and designer for one

HUNT FAILS FOR FLYING FAMILY

Copenhagen, Sept. 12 (INS)—Fears for the safety of the "flying family" of Hutchinsons mounted rapidly today as widespread search failed to reveal the fate of their plane and its eight passengers, forced down at sea off Greenland.

Officials held out only one hope that the pilot, George R. Hutchinson, formerly of Richmond, Va., his wife, two daughters and four companions had not been drowned. This was the possibility they had reached some uninhabited island on a remote part of Greenland's coast.

Since the radio station at Angmagalik, Greenland, picked up distress signals sent Sunday by Hutchinson when he was forced to make an emergency landing, no further word of his plane City of Richmond had been heard.

The British trawler Lord Talbot, 25 miles away, rushed to aid the plane, but reported no success.

STOCKS DROP $1 TO $8 A SHARE

New York, Sept. 12—Share prices were sent tumbling $1 to $8 on the New York Stock Exchange today with weakness in bonds and commodities as the contributing cause.

Rails were uniformly weak despite the more than seasonal rise in car loadings in Saturday's report.

Delaware & Hudson showed more than 7 points, while speculative favorites like Atchison, Pennsylvania and Union Pacific lost 3 to 4 points each.

American, American Telephone, Allied Chemical and Consolidated Gas dropped 2 to 3 points each. U. S. Steel was forced down about 3 points in heavy selling.

FLOYD GIBBONS SPEAKS FOR WORKLESS 'VAGRANTS'

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Copyright, 1932, by International News Service.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 12 (INS)—Hello, everybody—here's a war and here's a yarn.

FLOYD GIBBONS

I had a hunch that it was going to happen, and that's why I beat it out here without orders or instructions—just to be on the job when the fireworks started.

Stand by now and hold on to your hat, because this week you are witnessing the grand opening of the grand offensive which is to continue with increasing ferocity until the political Armistice Day on November 8.

Just a month ago President Hoover hurled the secretary of war, the chief of staff and the United States army against hungry, homeless, jobless veterans and their wives and children in Washington, D. C., and drove them out of the capital of the nation they fought for.

Hoover Justifies Use of Fire and Sword on Vets

He did it with fire and sword and tear gas and tanks.

Today he justifies his action.

President Hoover's "justification" is based on the report of the Attorney-General that 829 ex-service men among the forty thousand that passed through the bonus camps in Washington have been convicted at one time or another of violating the laws of the country.

The violations range from felonious homicide, of which seven are reported, to drunkenness, of which 95 of the ex-service men had been found guilty at some time or another.

GLASSFORD, CAPITAL POLICE HEAD, ASSAILS REPORT

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Sept. 12 (INS)—"Atty.-Gen. Mitchell's report is at variance with the facts known to police."

This was the verdict of Washington's police superintendent, Pelham D. Glassford, after a careful study of the Justice Department's report on the bonus army presented today by President Hoover.

Glassford, who directed police supervision of the rifle-demallion army of marchers during its stay in the capital, took issue with the conclusions presented by Atty.-Gen. Mitchell in several specific instances and announced he would issue a comprehensive statement covering the whole thing for tomorrow morning's papers.

NEVER ASKED, HE SAYS

First of all, Glassford denied he ever appealed for the federal troops which drove out the marchers.

The Mitchell report, dealing with this question, he said:

"He (General Glassford) was asked the direct question whether he thought it necessary to secure the assistance of federal troops, to which he replied in the affirmative."

Glassford, discussing the report today for International News Service, said:

"I never asked for troops at any time. The statement that I had asked for them came from the district commissioners, not from me."

ASKS EXPLANATION

Glassford was critical of another phase of the Mitchell report specifically. The report in its section dealing with grand jury action after the bonus riots of July 28, leading up to the calling of Federal troops, said the court action had been unsatisfactory, and blamed the police department.

Glassford said he could not understand this, and has asked Inspector O. T. Davis, who was in charge of much of the police bonus work, for an explanation.

The reports has this to say of "unsatisfactory results":

"The reason is that on the day of the riot no detective officers were at Camp Marks, where originated the large movement to march over and attack the police.

"The function of having detectives and crime prevention agents in a position to observe and obtain evidence against those who at the last moment incited the riotous march and attack belonged to the district police. The inspector in charge (Davis) reports that he had no orders to place men for that purpose, and, on the contrary, on the day of the disturbance was directed to keep his men out of that area."

DISLOYALTY CHARGE

To this Glassford replied hotly:

"I am calling upon Inspector Davis for an explanation of this thing. It is news to me that one of my inspectors should be guilty of this disloyalty. I never issued any such orders."

Glassford said that in studying the report, he had studiously refrained from dealing with those phases in which the police were not specifically involved. He added that in his statement he would take up each question with which he thought it necessary to deal in detail.

The police superintendent was known throughout the occupation of the marchers as their best friend, and even assumed custody and disbursement of the marchers' funds for most of the time they were here.

FEARED TROOPS

Reports that he would arouse administration ire by his attitude were numerous, but he maintained his attitude of diplomacy in dealing with the situation throughout.

On the morning of the riot, Glassford publicly expressed the fear that the troops would "do more harm than good."

"Where are these men going when they are driven out by the troops? he asked at the time. "If they don't leave this section of the country they will be back here, and a greater problem then ever."

LOVE NOTE CLUE IN MURDER MYSTERY

DuBois was grilled all night at Plymouth by Asst. Dist. Atty. Sullivan, State Detective Michael Fleming, Police Chief Russell Dearborn and other investigating officials.

He repeated to them the story of the Montreal accident. He denied the murder. He refused to talk about the Boston blonde. And he was held on the murder charge for hearing in Plymouth district court.

DuBois sent for City Solicitor Jeremiah J. McAnarney as his lawyer. McAnarney figured in the famous Sacco-Vanzetti trial.

TWO PUZZLING QUESTIONS

The lawyer sat down with officials at the Plymouth courthouse to discuss the unique situation and the questions:

"Can a man be charged with murder when the body has not been found?"

"If there were a murder, where was it committed? Plymouth? Some other town in the Cape section? Braintree? Boston? New York?"

Officials at this conference included Judge Elmer J. Briggs, upon whose attitude the whole matter hinges. Others were Detective Fleming, Court Clerk Arthur White and Police Chief Dearborn.

Officials said they were confident they could have him held for murder, despite the lack of a corpus delicti, and meanwhile dragging of Great Herring Pond and digging up of the sod under the DuBois summer cottage was started.

It was believed that the body may be weighted down, thus accounting for its failure to reappear on the surface of the pond, although Mrs. DuBois, has been missing since August 10.

If not found in the pond or near the cottage, the body will be sought all over the canal section of the Cape, where there are scores of lakes and large wooded areas.

Search has already been made for the body in DuBois' Tuckahoe, N. Y., apartment, it was revealed.

BELIEVE GIRL INNOCENT

Search at the cottage prior to the arrest resulted in the finding of the love note from the attractive blonde who had been seen there with neighbors since the wife's disappearance.

The latter stated that the girl was very happy that the last obstacle had been removed and that their wedding could take place.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Sullivan, in appealing to the girl to come forward, said that he believes she knows nothing of the alleged crime, and probably believed the story of the Montreal auto accident.

It was Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Heinlein of Academy ave., Braintree, who were suspicious of the Montreal story, and performed international detective work, the result of which they turned over to the authorities.

Mrs. Carrie Heinlein, who counted herself Edith DuBois' best friend, gave the Boston Evening American an exclusive story today of her part in investigation of the murder mystery.

HE TELLS OF TRIP

She prefaced it by revealing that Edith DuBois had lived in Paris and there met DuBois during the war. The romance culminated in marriage in New York. They lived at various places around Boston, including Weymouth, and recently in Middle st., Braintree, in an apartment block which they owned.

"Last winter we took Edith to Florida with us and we have seen her a couple of times this summer," said Mrs. Heinlein.

"On August 10 DuBois came to our home and said Edith had gone to Montreal with a Mr. and Mrs. John Butler, people he had never seen before, but whom Edith had known in New York.

"We were surprised to hear of the trip and about the Butlers, as Edith never mentioned the Butlers to us.

"A few days later Mr. DuBois came to our house and said Edith had been killed in an auto accident in Montreal.

THEY PROBE STORY

"I asked him, 'Are you going to bring the body home for burial?' He said, 'No, she has been cremated in Montreal. I did that because she had often expressed such a wish.'

"While we saw an announcement of her death in a Braintree and a Quincy paper, we thought it peculiar that the Boston newspapers had never carried a line about the accident.

"It sort of preyed on our minds so a week ago we decided that we would go to Montreal and check up on Edith's death.

"We went to Montreal police headquarters, the customs officials and every hospital. We made inquiries about the accident in which, according to Mr. DuBois, not only his wife but also the Butlers had been killed.

"No one there had ever heard of any such accident.

"The police said if an accident of that sort had occurred anywhere in the province, they would have had a report about it, both at police headquarters and at what corresponds to our State House.

"There were no records in Montreal or in the Province of Quebec that indicated that any accident of that kind had occurred or that any Mrs. Edith DuBois had been injured or killed."

Meanwhile DuBois had told police, during the long grilling this morning at Plymouth, the same Montreal accident story, supplying all details.

The Butlers had called for Edith. DuBois had given her $500 for the trip. Then came word of the accident. The machine had gone over a steep bank. The Butlers had been instantly killed. Edith DuBois had lain injured for hours.

EVEN TELLS OF DOG

A white dog, whining by the roadside, attracted attention to the tragedy, the husband is alleged to have asserted. His wife was found unconscious, taken to a hospital in Montreal, six miles away, and there died, 15 hours after the accident.

Neighbors of the couple in Braintree and Plymouth gave police different versions given them, it is alleged, by DuBois to explain the absence of his wife.

DuBois told his questioners he never gave out any other version, that the Montreal story was true and that investigation would prove it.

Two detectives started from Plymouth for Braintree to question the man who gave out the accident story to the local newspapers.

The blonde "Grace" was described as about 28, five feet, five inches tall and very pretty.

NO BODY, NO CASE

State Detective Fleming said that there was no sign of the burial of a body under the Plymouth DuBois cottage near Great Herring Pond but that the place would nevertheless be dug up.

He came to Boston from New York and was employed for a long time as designer and salesman for Bigelow, Kennard & Co. He left that concern in January, 1922, going to New York, where he worked for Vetridge & Co., with shops at the Waldorf-Astoria and at 545 Fifth Ave.

Tuckahoe police said that the DuBois servant, a youth named Larry, was seen hanging out some clothing which had been washed, last Saturday, but has not been seen since.

Mr. and Mrs. DuBois were last seen together there early in August, when they left for Plymouth. They did not leave together, the wife going ahead, driving their car, and DuBois remaining behind to travel with a young married couple, he said.

Roosevelt's Son Will Tour West

Little Boars Head, N. H., Sept. 12—James Roosevelt, eldest son of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, today was a completely recovered from his recent illness and planned to join his father in Albany, N. Y., late today.

Law Asks Blonde Aid Death Probe

Through the Boston Evening American, Asst. Dist. Atty. John Sullivan of Plymouth County, chief investigator of the murder of Edith DuBois, allegedly by her husband, appealed for help today in finding the mysterious blonde "Grace," one of the central figures in the mystery.

While believing she is innocent of any connection with the crime, Sullivan thinks she has vital information which will entirely clear up the mystery.

Sullivan suggested that she get in touch with the Boston Evening American which will put her in touch with him or with Boston or state police. The girl is about 28 years old and five feet, five inches tall.

only Wall Street enjoys?

* * *

WHAT do the laboring people and employes generally throughout the nation care about the price of stocks in Wall Street if jobs are getting scarcer and scarcer and wages are going down and down and down?

What do the legitimate investors who lost their securities long ago because of the Wall Street collapse and the banking contraction care how the friends of the administration balloon the market between now and election day?

What do bankrupt business men, what do impoverished industrialists, what do striking and starving farmers care about the artificial prices of Wall Street stocks?

* * *

IT will not be brought back by an administration which killed for purely political reasons Speaker Garner's measure to relieve unemployment by extensive government construction.

It will not be brought back by an administration which brands as dangerous inflation any legitimate attempts to put money into general circulation, but which does not hesitate to use government billions to finance the financiers.

It will not be brought back by a gentleman who does not understand the fundamental democratic principles of American life and American business.

It will not be brought back by an executive whose chief experience is with foreign nations and whose chief concern is for the international bankers who deal with foreign nations.

It will not be brought back by a gentleman whose main interest is in moratoriums and foreign debt cancellations, and in the transfer of European burdens to American backs.

It will be built back, not for Wall Street alone, but for the whole country, by the farmers, the workers, the industrialists, the professional men, the legitimate business men, with the aid of an American administration which has intelligence enough to realize that this is the only way in which prosperity can be restored to the land—and which has patriotism enough to use the power of government to help American labor and American industries and legitimate American business, and not merely favor and pamper the international bankers and the speculative interests of Wall Street.

GIFT OF PRIEST IDENTIFIES MAN

A suit given him by a Cohasset priest led to the identification today of a Saturday night victim at Mystic and Rhode Island avenues, Somerville.

The man killed was Dennis Collins, 67, of Wisconsin ave., Somerville, uncle of the Rev. C. J. O'Leary of Cohasset.

He was struck, police said, by John W. Griffin, of Manning st., Medford, who was held in Somerville court today for a hearing October 3 on charges of operating so as to endanger and drunkenness.

The name, "C. J. O'Leary," sewed in the suit of the victim, was traced through a Boston clothing house to the account of Fr. O'Leary at the time he was a seminarian five years ago.

FATHER OUT OF JAIL TO SEE 3 'SACRIFICED' CHILDREN BURIED

MAINE PARENT BLAMES LAW FOR DEATHS

Claims Trio Would Not Have Burned Had He Not Been Jailed on Minor Charge

By WIN BROOKS

Down in Maine where the dry law and the game law are held as sacred — in some cases — as the Ten Commandments, they've hailed Lazzime Theriault of Howland out of the Bangor jail.

This noble act undoubtedly adds inestimably to the self-righteousness of a considerable group of persons.

It's true that they took Lazzime Theriault's little piece of venison away from him—and won't give it back—but this does not matter quite so much now because there are less hungry mouths in Laz Lazzime Theriault's family than there were Saturday when it was seized.

LAW GETS ITS DUE

It's equally true that Lazzime Theriault is only out of jail temporarily and will be tried in superior court and probably get a longer sentence than he got Saturday—but this doesn't matter so much either, because only half of Lazzime Theriault's six children are left to miss him.

The other three don't need any out-of-season deer meat for their little bodies and don't need any father to tell them stories, because they burned to death while the sterling law enforcement officers who found the venison in Lazzime Theriault's little shack were taking him to jail.

The Sunday newspapers carried a bare outline of the black tragedy at Howland, where Grace, three; Pauline, five, and Mildred, six, daughters of Theriault, perished in a blazing woodshed.

LAW ENVIOUS OF JOY

This is the real story.

Theriault had been out of work for a year. With his wife and his six children he kept his little home together with a bit of garden, the help of neighbors and an occasional odd job.

He kept his home together and he kept it happy and probably it was the very happiness of Lazzime Theriault's home (the home of a jobless man) that aroused the suspicions of the zealous law enforcement officers upon him.

No man out of work, in his circumstances of poverty, should be happy, they figured. There must be something wrong somewhere. Let's see now, what could it be?

NO DRY LAW VIOLATION

Maybe he's making beer.

Yes, that must be it. He must be making beer.

All right. We'll put a stop to that. We'll get a search warrant and we'll search his place and we'll put a stop to the beer making.

So Saturday they got a search warrant and they searched his place. Deputy Sheriff Harold E. Boynton went up there and with him went Game Warden George Davis. Probably they figure it would take two men to arrest Theriault and cart away all the beer that must be in his house.

The tragically strange part of it was that they didn't find any beer. There was no beer in the house and no sign that there ever had been any beer in the house.

They searched from cellar to attic but there wasn't any beer and there wasn't any beer bottle and there wasn't even the cap to any beer bottle.

FRIGHTFUL CRIME

So then they must have figured there was some other explanation for the happiness of a jobless man and they made one more search and lo, they came up a small piece of venison hanging.

Soon the sports from all the East will flock into Maine, pay their money for licenses, pay their money for guides, pay their money for outfitting and go into the woods and slaughter deer and take them home.

LAW RIPS OFF RUM YACHT DISGUISE

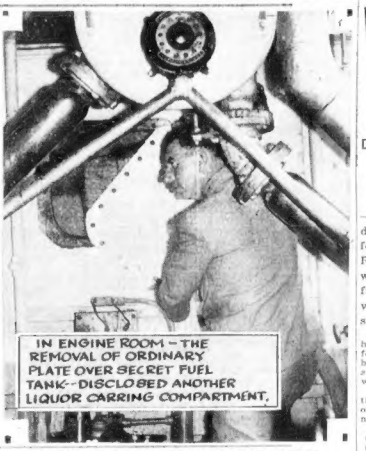
LIGHT THAT FAILED IN SMUGGLERS' PLOT
Inspector Duncan A. Grant sliding the electric light on the yacht Prudence seized in Dorchester Bay early today after a rum cargo valued at $150,000 had been revealed. Inspectors were not seeking liquor when suddenly something clicked and, lo, there lay a fortune in contraband. Story on Page 11

NOT PRUDENE ENOUGH ON PRUDENCE
Inspector Grant showing the panel and what lay in the secret compartment behind it when the wires and pulley attached to the light caused it to slide up. Most of the $150,000 cargo of choice liquors lay in this compartment and now the law holds the yacht while it hunts the owners. (Staff photos.)



FUEL, ALL RIGHTO, BUT NOT TO BE BURNED
Customs Engineer Humphrey Monahan showing the trick plate in the Prudence's engine room. The plate was supposedly over a tank containing fuel oil. However, when it was lifted there lay more of the cargo of very choice contraband liquors. There is conflict as to the owner of the yacht.

VICTIM CALLS SELF 'COL. RAYMOND'

Drys Lay Disappearance to Wet Foes; Boston Police Join in the Hunt

Memphis, Tenn., Sept 12 (AP)—Chief of police Will D. Lee today asked Memphis newspapers for a detailed description of Col. Raymond Robins, after a man who resembled the missing welfare worker and prohibition advocate was taken to the police station.

Lee said the man, who styled himself "Colonel Raymond," was found "badly beaten" near here, but he did not reveal the circumstances. He indicated the man was found today.

Beyond the request for information concerning the missing friend of President Hoover, Lee would not discuss the case.

"The man looks like pictures of Col. Robins," the police chief said. "That is all we have to work on."

He described the man as not critically ill.

Drys Accuse Wets in Robins Case; No Clues Yet Found

By JAMES J. SMITH
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Smithwest Harbor, Me., Sept. 12—While wets and drys wrangled today over the "blame" for the disappearance of Col. Raymond Robins, crusader for peace and temperance, the national search ordered by President Hoover produced not the slightest clue to the whereabouts of his friend and adviser.

Messages of sympathy and hope from every section of the country continued to pour into this almost deserted summer resort where Mrs. Margaret Dreier Robins, wife of the missing man and his co-worker for a quarter of a century, took an active part in directing the search.

THIRD DEGREE TRIAL DROPPED

Mineola, N. Y., Sept. 12 (INS)—All indictments against the Nassau County policemen growing out of the death of Eyman Stark by alleged "third degree" methods were dismissed today by Supreme Court Justice Johnston.

The dismissal was on motion of Dist. Atty. Elvin N. Edwards.

Trial was to have started today of Detective Sergeant Marcel Chagnon and Patrolmen Lance Ray and Harry Lilligren on a charge of second degree assault. They were three of nine Nassau County policemen indicted.

In asking dismissal of the indictments, Edwards explained he no longer entertained hope of obtaining a conviction. He said, however, he would probably ask a hearing before a police justice on a charge of third degree assault against the nine policemen. That charge is a misdemeanor, not indictable, he explained.

MILLION DOLLAR SMILE GIRL DIES

Milford, Sept. 12—Mrs. Alice Killeen Hurl, known during the war as "the girl with the million-dollar smile," died today in her home, 19 Walnut st.

As Alice Killeen of Dorchester, Mrs. Hurl was responsible for raising large sums for the benefit of the Yankee Division, and was "godmother" to 1800 boys in the outfit.

Mrs. Hurl was born in South Boston, and after residence in Dorchester, moved to Milford about ten years ago.

She was married to John B. Hurl, a theatrical producer, in 1922, and was the mother of three children.

She is survived also by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Killeen of Dorchester, and two brothers. She was a member of the Dorchester Catholic Women's Club and the Boston Singers' Club.

The funeral Wednesday morning will include a requiem mass in St. Mary's Church, Milford. Burial will be in St. Joseph's cemetery, West Roxbury.

Police Failure to Halt Gang Fight in Hospital Probed

Less than 24 hours after the refusal of a sergeant and a policeman to aid in quelling a City Hospital fight Saturday night, Capt. William Livingston of East Dedham st. station left for Maine, it was learned today as Police Supt. Crowley waited in vain for Livingston's report.

The police superintendent said he expected Capt. Livington's report and one from Sergt. Raymond Moynihan would arrive at headquarters today.

Capt. Livingston, who declared Saturday night that he would investigate the alleged refusal of Sergt. Moynihan to break up a free-for-all fight started by Frank J. "Keano" Keenan, Dorchester gangster, and two companions, is expected to be at his Maine camp until Wednesday.

When the reports failed to appear today, Supt. Crowley ordered Lieut. John J. Coughlin, who was in command of East Dedham st. station Saturday night, and Sergt. Moynihan, to submit reports immediately.

Following the hospital battle, which finally was stopped by Dr. Lawrence McCarthy, night supervisor, and some of his assistants, while Sergt. Moynihan and the patrolman looked on, Lieut. Coughlin declared he had assigned the sergeant and patrolman to the hospital for the specific purpose of preventing any trouble.

The station had been notified of the hour when Keenan, shot by rival gangsters in an alleged rum war in Roxbury, was to be discharged. At the hospital, Sergt. Moynihan claimed that he was there on other duties and "knew police business."

PLOT ON LIFE OF STALIN FOILED

London, Sept. 12 (INS)—A plot to assassinate Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator has been discovered by government agents in Moscow, a central news dispatch from Warsaw, Poland, said today.

Discovery of the plot was followed by wholesale arrests and imprisonment of 120 persons, including Communist army officers.

Commissar of War Voroshiloff allegedly was implicated in the plot according to the report.

Stalin, it was said, hurriedly returned to Moscow after the plot became known.

38 Safe, Two Dead in Wreck of Nova Scotia Collier

Sydney, N. S., Sept. 12 (AP)—The broken hull of the 5000-ton collier Watford rested today on a ledge 100 yards from shore off Cape Percy. Saturday, high seas, driven before an 80-mile gale, swept the Watford past her haven at Sydney and down the coast to the Cape, and on the rocks.

In the Watford's chartroom lay the body of John Johnson, fireman, who died of shock and exposure when the steamer struck. In a Glace Bay morgue was the body of First Officer William Knight, drowned when his foot had slipped as he tried to secure himself in in a breeches buoy.

But in Sydney, Captain E. H. Penrud and 37 others were safe, recuperating from hours spent on a tossing deck and a bitter journey in the bosun's chair.

The Watford, inbound for Sydney in light ballast, after discharging coal at Montreal, was near her home port when the storm reached hurricane proportions. Her propeller whirled in open air as towering seas tossed the ship. Water was pumped into the after hold to steady her, but at 9 o'cloc, she had been carried past the mouth of Sydney harbor. Her wireless operator signalled "a very dangerous position." An hour later she struck. The aerial carried away and further communicating was impossible.

Lifeboats could not live in the sea. But Second Officer Herbert Mann lived in it. He carried a line through the surf, only to find that when he had reached shore the cord had been swept away from the ship.

Rockets were shot across the 50-foot cliff, where rescuers, unable to stand against the wind, laid flat to make the line fast. One by one members of the crew came ashore in the breeches buoy. First Officer Knight was second last to start. He was swept away, grabbed at a floating hatch and disappeared.

DAVIS WINS PLEA TO SPEED TRIAL

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—U. S. Senator James J. Davis today obtained a severance for purposes of trial of the case of the government against him and Bernard C. McGuire and the other defendants named in indictments charging participation in lotteries.

After hearing argument by U. S. Atty. George Z. Medalie and Charles H. Tuttle, David attorney, Federal Judge Kennedy granted the severance so that the senator's case may be brought to trial next Monday.

Tuttle, himself a former United States attorney, urged the judge to give Senator Davis opportunity to "secure vindication" at the hands of a jury at the earliest possible moment. He said the Pennsylvania senator would certainly be ready to go to trial by Sept. 19.

Opera Singing Katydid Found by Explorer

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—Dr. Raymond Ditmars, curator of reptiles and mammals at the New York Zoological Park, returned today from Panama with the bushmaster, the largest poisonous snake on the American continent, which he sought there.

However, he brought back a katydid, which he says sings like an operatic star; a large bronze colored frog, a black tarantula, a number of iguanas and some huge grasshoppers with spurs like a rooster.

BANDITS WRECK TRAIN, KILL 24

Harbin, Manchuria, Sept. 12 (AP)—Twenty-four persons were killed, upwards of 70 injured, and an undetermined number kidnaped and 600 robbed in a series of three combination bandit raids and train wrecks near here within 24 hours.

GUN FIGHTER'S BAIL $50,000

Charged with assault and battery with intent to murder, Capt. Charles H. Bumps, retired army officer, was held in $50,000 today in East Boston court for a hearing Sept. 26.

Capt. Bumps is accused of shooting Albert M. Martel, 37, his neighbor in Bowdoin st., Winthrop, in a dispute over a table and chairs claimed as her property by Martel's landlady but taken by Capt. Bumps and placed in his barn.

Martel is in a critical condition at Community Hospital in Winthrop, with part of his face shot away and with five pieces of lead in one lung and four in the heart muscles.

APPEAL FOR ELY AND ROOSEVELT

Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic State Committee today sent out an appeal to all Democratic candidates for public office to concentrate from now until election day on speeches designed to promote the candidacies of Roosevelt, Garner and Ely.

The chairman figures there will be a minimum of 10,000 of these addresses made by the candidates for minor offices by the end of the campaign.

He also asks them to call attention of their listeners to the importance of not only getting themselves registered but to seeing that their friends as well get on the voting list.

Registration for election day, he reminds them, starts a week from next Wednesday.

HOOVER DEFIES VETERANS BY B. E. F. ATTACK

Washington, Sept. 12 (INS)—The Hoover administration was on record today with a direct challenge to the American Legion, which assembled in Portland, Ore.

Aroused by reports a move is afoot to have a resolution adopted by the legionnaires condemning the White House action last July in routing the bonus marchers from Washington with Federal troops, President Hoover caused issuance of a 6,000-word report from Atty-Gen. Mitchell defending the incident.

From all surface indications, the President is prepared not only to justify his action in forcibly evicting the ex-service men, but is ready to carry the matter to the nation as a campaign issue should the legion take formal exception.

ATTRACTED CRIMINALS

The Mitchell report minced no words in denouncing the march on the capital to secure immediate payment of the bonus. After itemizing a table that showed 829 of the 4?3 veterans who applied for government loans to get home had been convicted of criminal offenses ranging from felonious homicide to traffic violations, the Attorney-General said:

"It is probable the bonus army brought into the city of Washington the largest aggregation of criminals that ever had been assembled in the city at any one time."

That a Congressional investigation will be forced to sift the charges levelled upon the World War veterans by Atty-Gen. Mitchell was considered likely.

GROSS INJUSTICE

Senator Fletcher (D.) of Florida said the President failed to handle the bonus marchers' situation properly, adding:

"No doubt there were some hangers-on in the bonus army, some men who did not belong there, but as a whole they were a fine upstanding lot of men, who had fought for their country.

"To make sweeping charges that the bonus boys were a lot of criminals is a gross injustice.

"If the President had talked to the marchers, explained to them why he could not approve immediate payment of the bonus, I believe all trouble would have been averted. At any rate there was no excuse for sticking bayonets in them."

DESERVES REBUKE

Senator Brookhart said:

"The bonus marchers were a lot less dangerous to the country than the Wall Street crowd that controls the White House.

"I think it is outrageous for the attorney-general to try to brand these boys as criminals and trouble makers. They were genuine soldiers.

"The President in issuing his attack is trying to head off a vote of censure from the American Legion convention. I think the Legion will take care of the President's statement. He deserves a rebuke from the Legion for this attack.

Vets Seethe With Anger at Mitchell's Report Branding Bonus Marchers as Criminals

STORM BEATS AROUND HIS HEAD

President Hoover at his desk in the White House while veterans at the Legion convention in Portland, Ore., and the country over expressed indignation as the report of the eviction of the Bonus Marchers from the capital was released on the chief executive's order. (International News Photos.)

BRANDS VETS CROOKS

"It is probable the bonus army brought the largest aggregation of criminals that ever had been assembled in the city," said Atty.-Gen. William D. Mitchell, above, bringing down a storm of denial from all over the country.

DEFENDS COMRADES

National Commander Henry L. Stevens of the American Legion who came to the defense of his fellow members today, saying too often the veterans are "condemned by misinformed and ignorant critics who do not consider justice."

MITCHELL BELIES FACTS, SAYS LEADER

"Mr. Mitchell's charges are absolutely without foundation in fact," says Walter W. Waters, above, commander of the B. E. F. "It was Mitchell's job to furnish this information and he did the best he could do. His statement will antagonize thousands of veterans."

STEVENS CALLS FOR JUSTICE

By HENRY L. STEVENS, JR.
National Commander American Legion

Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 12—In the past year there has been considerable publicity given organizations seeking to tear down the efforts of years in respect to legislation proposed by the Legion and enacted by Congress for the benefit of all veterans.

One of the most important things pertaining to our disabled veterans to be decided by this convention will be the Legion's course regarding some of the legislation which is under fire under the plea of economy.

Too often the Legion has been condemned by misinformed or ignorant critics who do not consider the question of justice and equity, but only the cost.

Of course, war costs money. It costs lives and the health of thousands of our best citizens, too, and there is a just debt that the American people owe those who suffered the most in order to insure the safety and liberty of our people and of our country. We will have many other important subjects on which convention action will be taken.

The immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates, or the so-called bonus, undoubtedly will be one.

Mitchell Flouts Bill of Rights, Declares Patman

By WRIGHT PATMAN
Representative from Texas

Portland, Ore., Sept. 12—It matters not whether a few members of the bonus army allegedly had criminal records. The principle involved is the right of peaceful assembly to petition Congress in a just cause.

If it is true that the gathering was composed of criminals, then the bonus army represented a great reform movement because the members were peaceful and law-abiding in Washington.

They went to the capital they had fought to protect, and remained there peacefully starving until routed with gas bombs and bayonets.

Mitchell gave his legal opinion that the bonus army could be tried and convicted of trespassing. Why, then, were they deprived of their day in court—the right possessed by every American citizen?

It is my prediction that the American Legion convention will pass a resolution censuring those persons who would deny American citizens the right of peaceful assembly, as was done the bonus army.

Hoover's Defense of Bonus Army Ousting Angers Vets

By RALPH T. O'NEIL
Past National Commander of the American Legion
Written Expressly for International News Service

Portland, Ore., Sept. 12 (INS)—President Hoover has aroused deep resentment among veterans by his ill-advised defense of the unjustified use of federal troops in ejecting bonus marchers from Washington. In my opinion, it was unfortunate.

The bonus march may have been irregular; it may have drawn to the capital hundreds of men with police records, but there were other and more humane methods of getting them to abandon their cause than to assail them with bayonets and gas. The President can scarcely win popular approval of his action by charging the ranks of our veterans are filled with criminals.

The criminals, if there were any, should have been dealt with through the courts.

The thousands of service men in Washington, who were not criminals or Communists, should have been treated as patriotic citizens, perhaps wrong in their cause and perhaps misguided, but entitled to the protection, not persecution, of our government.

The nation, in my opinion, will not forget that federal troops, armed with rifles and bayonets, supported by tanks, machine guns and artillery, drove hundreds of women and children from the Anacostia camp in the dead of night. There is a dispute whether one child died from the gas attack, but no one can deny that hundreds of women and children did suffer from it.

Seven Arrested in No. Carolina Strike

High Point, N. C., Sept. 12 (AP)—Seven pickets, including three women, were arrested here today as 20 police clashed with 400 Stehl silk mill strikers who attempted to prevent the clearing of a driveway to the mill grounds. The brush followed a request by officials of the mill that police clear the driveway.

B. E. F. COUNSEL SAYS REPORT MISLEADING

By HERBERT S. WARD
Written for Universal Service

Washington, Sept. 12 (UB)—The President's release contains an element of truth presented in a false aspect that is wholly misleading to one not intimately acquainted with the history of the B. E. F. in Washington.

The great majority of the B. E. F. was so orderly that Secretary of War Hurley told Commander Waters on July 28 that the B. E. F. had been a serious problem to the administration because his men had been so "absolutely law-abiding and orderly."

For so large an aggregation of criminals, as described in Atty.-Gen. Mitchell's report, the police records of Washington show no increase of criminal offenses during the period of B. E. F. occupation. Either all these desperadoes reformed for two and one-half months, or there is something wrong with the figures.

I have never heard of any person being intimidated by any member of the B. E. F.

Secretary Hurley, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Heath, and Chief of Police Glassford were all advised that the B. E. F. would not oppose the United States with force. There is some evidence that the brick throwing in the Pennsylvania ave. area, which led to the shooting, was started by a group of unidentified men who came into that camp about the time the police arrived.

I was at the B. E. F. headquarters during several days and nights. There was never even the suggestion of a threat against any constituted authority.

The real trouble now seems to me to be the large number of "vote Hoover on November 8" signs on B. E. F. automobiles in Washington prior to the Hoover raid.

Veterans' Club Defends Ousting of Bonus Men

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—Assertion that President Hoover "was right in the ousting of the bonus expeditionary force from Washington" was contained in a letter sent to the American Legion convention by J. A. Lazar, national commander of the Veterans' Hoover club, and made public here today.

"He performed his oaht-bound duty," the letter said. "For the President to have remained inactive after the riot and bloodshed would have meant that the country had fallen into the hands of a few disgruntled insurgents self-styling themselves dictators.

OF COURSE, ALL THE B. E. F. MEN WERE "VAGRANTS," SAYS FLOYD GIBBONS

ous convicts include breaking traffic regulations, vagrancy and spitting on the sidewalk, which comes under the heading of disorderly conduct.

This constitutes the "extraordinary proportion of criminal" elements which President Hoover sees in the report—the "extraordinary proportion" which justified the calling out of the armed forces of the nation.

As I figure it, the proportion of 829 "convicts" out of forty thousand men that passed through the camps, is something under three per cent.

Percentage of Crime Is Lower Than Harding's Cabinet

Why, President Harding's own cabinet, of which Mr. Hoover was secretary of commerce, had a higher criminal record than that—yes sir—at least ten percent of Mr. Harding's cabinet was convicted and sent to the penitentiary and served its time behind the bars—AND IT WASNT FOR PARKING IN FRONT OF A FIRE PLUG EITHER.

The "extraordinary proportion of criminal elements" was discovered by the Department of Justice, which Mr. Hoover says he directed to "exhaustively investigate" the so-called bonus riot.

After a month's exhaustive investigation, the Department of Justice sleuths revealed that there were 69 ex-service men who had been found guilty of vagrancy.

I'm no lawyer, much less an Attorney-General, but I always thought anybody who had no permanent address and was without visible means of support was guilty of vagrancy.

Why, the whole doggone bonus army were vagrants.

And so are ten million other unemployed American citizens.

No jobs, no homes, just vagrants.

The vagrancy of the United States of America is the thing that sent the veterans to Washington.

That's what they went to Washington to explain.

They don't want to be vagrants.

The Department of Justice did not have to "exhaustively investigate" to find that 69 of the veterans were vagrants.

The thousands that tramped to Washington went there to tell the President and the Congress that they were vagrants and that they were tired of being vagrants, and they wanted to know then and still want to know why, they are vagrants and whose fault it is and how long they must continue to wander around the country without a permanent address or visible means of support.

Congress saw them, but did nothing.

President Hoover refused to even see them.

The veterans were in the wrong B. E. F. THE OTHER WAS THE BANKERS EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

Were they received and did they collect?

In President Hoover's crime chart of the convicted ex-service men of the bonus army is one item which will bring the blush of shame to most veterans.

Out of that destitute forty thousand that tramped to Washington 49 were guilty of violating the liquor laws—you know, drinkin' and carrying on like that with alcohol.

The other thirty-nine thousand and some veterans must have been dry, and that's just what's worrying the delegates to this convention—these legionnaires who have been trying to do something about the beer business ever since they came back from France and found it had been changed from a business to a racket.

Those 829 convicts which brought the criminal record of the bonus army up to a lower percentage than the criminal record of President Harding's Cabinet—those 829 convicted veterans—are not the only ones that come under the ban of the President's investigation.

There were some 250 others who had been charged with crimes or misdemeanors, but had been able to prove themselves innocent.

Crime Charged Only Heard of in Russia Before

As for example, 63 culprits who had been charged with the crime of "suspicion and investigation"—those are the words from the Attorney-General's crime chart and, although I never heard of this crime outside of the Cheka in Soviet Russia, I presume it must be a legal one because it is itemized in those words by the Attorney-General of the United States.

I can't quite understand why these 250 men who proved their innocence were itemized in the "police record" category and stigmatized by President Hoover as constituting part of the "extraordinary proportion of criminal element."

The legal presumption is that those men are innocent in the eyes of the law and society.

Many men have faced the bar of justice on any number of charges from fraud to shady business practise, but have been able to clear themselves and after that have reached the ranks of the high and mighty.

In law, the slate is wiped clean and innocence established; in cricket—well, in cricket it's not considered the sporting thing to do to bring up the trial in which they proved their innocence and refer to it as a police record or a criminal past.

It just occurs to me that the cabinet of this President of the United States is the last source from which such intimation should come.

Why No Arrests if They Were Dangerous Criminals

There's another thing I can't understand about the report.

It reveals that the government had all of its legal and crime detection machinery working and it found the "extraordinary proportion of criminal element" in the person of 829 ex-service men who had been convicted of crimes.

If these men were such dangerous criminals, why were they not arrested in Washington?

The department of the government charged with protecting the country from criminals and enforcing the law reveals today that they knew these 829 dangerous criminals were in Washington.

If it was dangerous for them to be in Washington, why were they not arrested?

If the administration considered this "extraordinary proportion of criminal element," a menace to life and property in Washington, why then did the administration scatter these dangerous criminals throughout the peaceful communities and neighboring states?

I WONDER HOW DANGEROUS THOSE VETERANS WERE?

The chief of police in Washington reported no additional robberies or murders in Washington while the veterans were there.

No Violence Anywhere Until Government Started It

There was no violence between the veterans and police until the agents of the federal government were ordered onto the scene.

Brig.-Gen. Pelham Glassford the Washington chief of police, handled everything all right without violence and without trouble until the administration ordered treasury agents to start the eviction.

Governor Ritchie in Maryland managed to handle the fleeing men, women and children without the use of armed forces. There was no violence or trouble in Maryland under ordinary police supervision.

No violence or trouble happened in Virginia when veterans fled southward from terror of the night attack of the United States Army on their camp.

Governor Finchot in Pennsylvania seemed to be able to manage the veterans with ordinary police methods in his state.

Why, even that talkative little ex-prizefighter of a mayor of that little mountain town in Pennsylvania to which thousands of the fugitives fled—he handled the whole business alone, without bloodshed, without violence, without trouble.

JUST A CONSTABLE'S JOB!

But in Washington—in the District of Columbia, in that ten mile square of non-political neutrality—it was a case of nerves and jitters—it was violence and terror and tragedy under the handling of President Hoover's cabinet—the secretary of war, the attorney general and his federal marshals, the secretary of treasury and his treasury agents and the secretary of labor with his bureau of emigration agents.

NERVES AND JITTERS.

VICE PRESIDENT CURTIS CALLED OUT THE MARINES AND PRESIDENT HOOVER CALLED OUT THE ARMY.

I don't believe President Hoover yet understands or realizes the enormity of what happened that night a month ago in Washington, when he dined with friends at the White House and retired early while the light from the flames of the burning veterans' camp in Anacostia reflected red on the night sky over Washington and on the windows of the White House.

I base this belief on the following words taken from his public statement today. He says a large portion of the veterans "returned to their homes."

Many Things That Hoover Cannot Understand

He does not understand that they have no homes to return to.

They are homeless.

They are hungry.

They are wanderers.

No visible means of support and no permanent address.

The only ones I know of that reached home are the two that are planted across the river from Washington in the sacred soil of Arlington.

They were shot and killed the day of the Washington riot.

In the uniform and the service of their country, they earned those narrow homes in Arlington with full honors and respect. These two American veterans joined the honorable company of the nation's soldier dead, one month before their living comrades were stigmatized as "the extraordinary proportion of criminal element."

Strange, but did you notice that President Hoover in his public statement accompanying the reply expresses no note of sympathy or regret for the killing of those two American boys that now lie in honor graves in Arlington?

NO SYMPATHY; NO REGRET; ONLY JUSTIFICATION.

THAT'S WHY I BELIEVE PRESIDENT HOOVER DOES NOT YET UNDERSTAND WHAT HAPPENED IN WASHINGTON.

FACTS IGNORED IN HOOVER ALIBI FOR OUSTING BONUS VETS

MITCHELL'S REPORT CALLED FABLE OF INACCURACIES

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Washington, Sept. 12—In a desperate political effort to save the Hoover administration from censure, on the eve of the American Legion convention, Attorney-General Mitchell has compiled an amazing report on the eviction of the bonus army from Washington last July, which so bristles with glaring inaccuracies of fact that it would read like a burlesque but for the ghastly tragedy which envelopes the whole incident.

Made public in Washington, with the obvious view of warding off the impending blow to re-election hopes at Portland, the attorney-general's version of the midnight routing and burning out of the miserable ex-service men from their wretched hovels, has fanned again to flames the controversy over the President's whole handling of the half-starved bonus seekers.

Many of the charges hurled at these splendid veterans of the World War, by the attorney-general of the United States, are wholly at variance with the general public conception of the entire bonus incident.

Attorney-General Mitchell makes a sweeping allegation that: "a considerable number of the marchers were not in the military service during the World War," a charge which has been repeatedly denied by the responsible leaders of the bonus army, who have explained to the apparent satisfaction of everybody, save perhaps the President and the attorney-general, the great care taken in registering applicants for shelter in the bonus camps in Washington. Non-service men were rigidly excluded.

Mitchell Says Real Vets Had Left

The attorney-general also makes the sweeping and astounding charge that 22 per cent of the bonus marchers of whom finger prints were taken, were men of criminal record, or 1069 out of 4723 thus subjected to investigation.

The purport of the attorney-general's charge is that at the time of the eviction of the bonus marchers from their camps in Washington, by United States troops ordered out by President Hoover, most of the bona fide ex-service men had left the city, and that those who remained, and who were burnt out of their shacks in Pennsylvania ave., elsewhere in Washington, and on the Anacostia flats, were largely imposters masquerading as ex-service men, Communists, and men of criminal record.

Director Hines, of the Veterans' Bureau, through which funds were made available by Congress for the voluntary return of the bonus marchers to their homes, was quoted in the newspapers at the time as saying that "90 per cent of the bonus marchers were ex-service men."

That was a damaging admission. Attorney-General Mitchell seeks to shatter it by declaring, "General Hines made no such statement."

It is significant, however, in this connection, that of the two men killed in Pennsylvania ave. in a riot with the police, on the afternoon of July 28, William J. Huska, and Eric Carlson, were both proved to be EX-SERVICE MEN OF HONORABLE RECORD, and both were BURIED IN ARLINGTON WITH FULL MILITARY HONORS.

Vets Carried Their Papers With Them

It is also pertinent to recall, in this connection, that the three who were subsequently indicted in connection with the bonus riots, were ALL EX-SERVICE MEN.

It is unfortunate for the reception which the report of Attorney-General Mitchell is certain to receive, that of the members of the bonus army who have emerged as identities in the news, ALL WERE WITHOUT A SINGLE EXCEPTION EX-SERVICE MEN.

Some radicals were arrested in a radical demonstration at the White House, but although this incident occurred while the bonus army was in Washington nobody in this city thought for a moment of seeking to connect the two.

This writer has personally come into contact with certainly not less than 200 of the men of the bonus army, both before and since the eviction.

Served Country in Hour of Peril

In nearly all cases, in the course of conversation about the war service of the men, he has been shown their discharge papers, In no instance was there any reluctance to show them.

In many instances this writer encountered ex-soldiers who had seen service at the front in territory familiar to the writer, who also saw service there as a war correspondent. A smattering of broken French, a glib knowledge of remote and little-known French towns, invariably stamped the bonus marcher as a veteran who had served overseas.

In no instance that came within the personal knowledge of this writer was he ever made suspicious of the war service of one of these men. So far as this writer knows, of a fairly comprehensive acquaintance with them, the bonus marchers were practically 100 per cent upstanding American citizens who had served their country in an hour of peril, and many of whom had been wounded in action.

So far as the charge of men of criminal record is concerned, there were doubtless such in the A. E. F.

No large group of men is free from men of criminal record. But doubtless also there were more out-of-town pickpockets in attendance at the inauguration of President Hoover than there were radicals and criminals among the bona fide ex-service men who came to Washington in their misery and despair to collect what the government had already promised to pay them.

Although charging that a "very much larger proportion of the bonus army than was realized at the time, consisted of ex-convicts, persons with criminal records, radicals, and non-service men," Attorney-General Mitchell hastens to add—with due regard, doubtless to the delicacy of the political factor involved—"on the other hand, a very considerable number were genuine ex-service men of good intentions and clean records."

That must be regarded as a clever use of what Theodore Roosevelt would have called "weasel words," which suck the meaning out of other words.

Official Report Contradicts Itself

On page one of this statement the attorney-general says:

"A considerable number of the marchers were not in military service during the World War."

But on page three he takes a verbal hand-spring, and with a remarkable exhibition of ground and lofty word tumbling, he says:

"On the other hand, a very considerable number were genuine ex-service men of good intentions and clean records."

Indeed, the statement as a whole is as incapable of holding water as a colander.

Speaking of the routing of the bonus marchers from their shacks and half-demolished buildings in lower Pennsylvania ave., on the afternoon of July 28, and later at Anacostia, where the shacks at both places were burned, the attorney-general says: "THE CAUSE OF THE OUTBREAK OF THE FIRE IN THE PENNSYLVANIA AVE. AREA IS NOT KNOWN."

If the cause of these fires is not known to the learned attorney-general, he must be the only person in Washington thus drenched in colossal ignorance of a commonplace.

That fire in Pennsylvania ave. area was started by the soldiers.

People of Washington Know

The reason this writer is able thus to state this as a fact without qualification is because he was there, on the scene, and saw the soldiers going about applying the torch. If the attorney-general of the United States still feels ignorant, he can ask the people of Washington. Many of them saw the soldiers burning these shacks.

This writer arrived at the scene as the fire engines, with screaming sirens, threaded their raucous way through the crowds of people.

This writer saw these fire engines stand idly by. They were there to prevent the fire spreading, not to extinguish it.

Not only did this writer see the soldiers firing those shacks, but he saw one woman trying in vain to rescue some article of wearing apparel which she had drying on a line. She was shoved back, and her dress burnt up, too.

When it was discovered later that a great number of magnificent shade trees, some of them doubtless 100 years old, had been killed by these fires, the authorities were glad to SHIFT THE BLAME FOR THE CONFLAGRATION ONTO THE BONUS MARCHERS. Atty.-Gen. Mitchell is more ingenious—he suspects the exploding gas bombs.

Fire Prevented Return of Vets

The troops burned these shacks in order that to their glowing embers the bonus marchers could not return. That was well known to everybody on the scene at the time.

Atty.-Gen. Mitchell says of what he calls the "Communist camp" on 12th st., southwest, just south of the white marble Department of Agriculture, that it "was not disturbed by the troops but was voluntarily evacuated by the marchers."

Atty.-Gen. Mitchell is again in error. This writer, after leaving the Pennsylvania ave. area, proceeded in a taxicab, with another reporter, to the 12th st. area. The gas from the bombs thrown by the troops was so dense in this residential district, as we passed through, that all the occupants of the taxicab were obliged to hold handkerchiefs over their faces.

As this writer passed among these people the hoofbeats of the slowly advancing cavalry could be heard.

Realizing the hopelessness of their frightful plight, with night falling into purpling shadows over the top of the monument reared to the memory of the great and noble founder of American freedom under the flag, these tatterdemalions, with their despairing women and children, moved on down the street with no coherent notion as to where they would find a place to sleep, or a morsel to eat.

Police Records Show Mitchell Wrong

This writer was present when the United States Cavalry arrived. If those bonus marchers hadn't been evacuated by the troops, in God's name how would a proper respect for the English tongue lead one to another description?

No, Atty.-Gen. Mitchell is wrong again. It is apparent he has been sadly misinformed,—or misdirected.

Now, as a matter of fact, there were nine bonus army units encamped in the so-called 12th st. area. It is this area which the attorney-general describes as being "occupied principally by Communists headed by Pace."

Atty.-Gen. Mitchell is wrong again. This area was not "occupied principally by Communists," and the police records will not bear Mr. Mitchell out.

Of the nine units in this area only one was of Communists, commanded by John T. Pace. The other eight were ex-service men.

A police checkup at the time of the attempt to picket the White House by the Communists, on July 21, disclosed that there were only 210 radicals then in the city.

The attorney-general himself states that there were, after the adjournment of Congress, from 6000 to 8000 bonus marchers in Washington. Police figures officially place the radicals at not to exceed 210 at their peak, a very small percentage.

What then became of the attorney-general's statement that "there is irrefutable proof that a very large body of Communists and radicals, some ex-service men and some not, were in the city as part of the bonus army"?

Statement for Portland Consumption

The attorney-general's "irrefutable proof" is very easily refuted by the records of the Washington police.

It seems obvious that this whole statement by the attorney-general was not intended for consumption in Washington, where the facts are well-known, but for consumption in the country at large, and particularly in Portland, Oregon.

There are other police records, official figures, with which the attorney-general also appears to be unfamiliar.

"It is probable," says Mr. Mitchell, in his report to the President, and given out by the White House, "the bonus army brought into the city of Washington the largest aggregation of criminals that had ever been assembled in the city at any one time."

There is absolutely nothing whatever in the official police records of Washington to sustain this deadly blow by the administration at the integrity of the ex-service men of the bonus army.

On the contrary the two months, June and July, when the bonus army was in Washington, were marked by no increase in crime whatever. In some crimes there was an actual decrease during this period.

These records disclose that in this entire period only 362 bonus marchers were arrested, and of these only 12 were guilty of crimes. The Reds were charged with minor offenses.

There were two assault cases involving bonus marchers, and seven assaults with deadly weapons, out of a total of 41 such cases in the city.

With all their misery and destitution, there was but one case of the passing of a bad check by a bonus marcher during the two months period.

Hoover Upholds Vets' Right to Seek Aid

Washington, Sept. 12 (US)—President Hoover's statement releasing Atty.-Gen. Mitchell's report on the bonus riots follows:

"On the 28th of July last I announced that I had directed the Department of Justice to exhaustively investigate and report in full upon the incidents of the so-called bonus riots of that day in Washington and to present the facts, through sworn witnesses, to the grand jury. I further stated that I should make the attorney-general's report public when received by me.

"The investigation has been completed. In giving out the report which shows the character of many of the persons assembled, the incidents and character of the instigators of the riots, I wish to state emphatically that the extraordinary proportion of criminal, Communist and non-veteran elements amongst the marchers as shown by this report, should not be taken to reflect upon the many thousands of honest, law-abiding men who come to Washington with full right of presentation of their views to the Congress.

"This better element and their leaders acted at all times to restrain crime and violence but after the adjournment of Congress a large portion of them returned to their homes and gradually these better elements lost control. This report should correct the many misstatements of fact as to this incident with which the country has been flooded."

COLLEGIAN LEADING IN NATIONAL GOLF TILT

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Perfumery Jack Kearns. He Is the Man Behind. Walker's Ace in Hole.

A Tough Combination for Herr Schmeling

WHEN MAX SCHMELING and Mickey Walker crawl through the ropes in the big Milk Fund hoot in New York next week we wouldn't give a tinker's "darn" for Smiling Mickey's chances if it wasn't for one man—"Doc" Kearns. Perfumery Jack may reek with the essences of the Orient and the perfumes of Araby, he may lug around with him a wardrobe of 30 suits of the choicest Picadilly creations, and change them every hour and a half of the day; he may bedeck himself with beflowered silken pajamas and turn his bedchamber into a cross between Milady's boudoir and a Turkish harem, but when it comes to managing, maneuvering, handling and training knights of the cauliflowered ear this fellow, who brought the greatest fighter of all time, Jack Dempsey, to the top, when a dozen other managers had failed, and worked the welterweight Mickey Walker into some of the most remunerative heavyweight matches in the world and has kept him "in the money" despite numerous reverses, needn't doff his chapeau even to Bill Brady, the only man in fistic history who ever managed two world's heavyweight champions. And even although Schmeling on all fistic comparisons and past performances may figure to punch little, fighting, scrapping Mickey full of holes, we are not going to be feolish enough to pick the Dutchman as any lead pipe cinch. Not with smooth, oily, clever, canny, astute, and mayhap, a bit unscrupulous Perfumery Jack Kearns behind the opposite corner. No Sirs-e-e! Not by the proverbial jugfull!

WE'VE LOOKED 'EM all over since the halcyon days of Corbett, Jeff, Fitz and Sharkey, yet we've never seen a greater heavyweight than Jack Dempsey. But where, oh where would Jack Dempsey have been if it hadn't been for this aforementioned "Doc" Kearns? Before the winds of chance blew the hobo from Manassa, Colorado, and the ex-fighter and underworld figure from south of the Slot in San Francisco, together, Dempsey had been a couple of years in the ring and never had worked out of the ham and bean class. He had been managed or mismanaged by half a dozen managers. Everyone from "Windy" Winner to "John the Barber" Reisler had taken turns in trying to make a meal ticket out of the future Killer and found it a bad job. "Doc" Kearns took hold of this ham and beaner and in two years developed him into the greatest heavyweight that ever trod the resin and the greatest box office attraction the world ever has seen.

A GREAT RING manager must be a combination of trainer, handler, schemer and conniver. He must have the art of boxing, the technique of boxing, at his proverbial fingertips. He must understand physical culture and training. He must know every trick and strategy of the ring. In addition he must be a master conniver, a shrewd manipulator and a born showman. Kearns proved himself all these and more. He turned Dempsey from a rough and ready right hand slugger into the master of the most deadly left hook the ring ever has seen. How Kearns strapped Dempsey's right hand to his waist and for weeks made him do all his ring work with left hand alone is familiar to everyone. The hundred and one other little ring tricks and strategies Kearns taught Dempsey are not so well known. Kearns' work in bringing out the innate possibilities of the great Dempsey, developing him into the greatest hitter of the ring only was part of the job.

FULL MANY A CAULIFLOWER is born to blush unseen and waste its sweetness in the tank town air. A dozen other managers failed to keep the light of the great Dempsey from being hidden in the bushel basket of mediocrity. It took a world of shrewd and clever manipulating and conniving to work Jack Dempsey into the championship match with Jess Willard. Some day perhaps, Jack Kearns will tell of the true rise of Dempsey. If he does he will open the eyes of some of those who mistakingly think they know their Cauliflower. It takes the uncanny strategy and conniving of a Disraeli or a Macchiavelli to maneuver a boxer into a million dollar match. Think of the millions Dempsey made under the management of Jack Kearns.

MANY THINK KEARNS' handling and maneuvering of Mickey Walker was even more clever and masterly than his direction of Dempsey. While Walker is a great little man Smiling Mickey is far from being a Dempsey. It has taken master manipulating to keep Smiling Mickey in the big money over the stretch of years Kearns has. Kearns has done it in the face of stubborn reverses. When Kearns took Walker under his wing after the death of Jack Bulger, Fate dealt him two knockdown buffets at the very start. Walker lost the welterweight title to Pete Latzo and then technically was knocked out by Joe Dundee. Other managers gave Kearns the laugh. They said Walker was "through." Smiling Mickey had been ten years in the ring at the time and it did look as if he had shot his bolt. That was back in 1926. But under Kearns' piloting Smiling Mickey arose like a Phoenix out of the ashes of defeat, beat Tiger Flowers for the middleweight title, and outside of the heavies has been the biggest money getter of the decade.

WHAT OTHER MANAGER besides Kearns could have maneuvered Walker into the match with Sharkey? And don't forget the astounding surprise of Smiling Mickey holding the terrible Sharkey man to a draw. On paper Sharkey outclassed Walker from here to the North pole. Yet the best Jack could get with Mickey was a draw. A couple of weeks before the Walker-Schmeling match was made Walker was beaten by old Johnny Risko. What other manager could have got Walker the Schmeling "shot" atop of that defeat by Risko? Watch out Herr Schmeling. Mickey has a habit of pulling an astonishing win after a reverse.

YES, FOLKS, THERE'S something uncanny about Perfumery Jack Kearns' handling and maneuvering of fighters. Smiling Mickey Walker is a great little fighter in his own right, a "big money" scrapper that can uncork his best fight when it is needed the most. And remembering how, under Kearns' handling, the fighting little divil from Kerreigh Head section of Elizabeth knocked the dope galley west by holding Jack Sharkey to a draw, we certainly are not going to make the mistake of predicting that Max Schmeling is going to knock Mickey from in under his corbeen. On dope Schmeling figures to make a punching bag out of Walker. That's just what Sharkey figured to do, too. And look what happened to Jack. In prognosticating the Schmeling-Walker match you must remember that Schmeling has two men to beat—Mickey Walker and Jack Kearns. They're a tough combination—a tough combination. Ask Jack Sharkey, Max!

TERRIERS GET STIFF GRID DRILL TODAY

After four days of conditioning, Boston University's grid squad will don complete equipment this afternoon and start contact work at Nickerson Field, Weston. The men will be given tackling and breaking through instructions.

Coach Lane was rather hesitant about starting contact so soon as the squad only numbers 31 and several of the veterans and newcomers who are expected to make bids for varsity jobs have not as yet put in an appearance, but he feels he can delay no longer.

The veterans who are still missing are Leo Silton, the Terriers' 200-pound tackle; Hugo Betoline, a veteran guard; Stan Fisher, another veteran guard; Danny Harrington, the outstanding lineman on the squad last year, and Johnny Ulman, who, as a sophomore, won a regular backfield job last season.

In addition to these veterans, there are three transfer students upon whom Coach Lane is depending greatly this season who are still missing. These boys are Dave Nemzinski, Johnny Paterno and Horire Cali.

When these boys report and the newcomers who are expected appear, Coach Lane will immediately start his offensive system, which will be a radical departure from any ever used at Boston University.

EAGLES' SOPH GRIDMEN BID FOR BERTHS

Jackson, N. H., Sept. 12—Coach Joe Mahoney was back in camp today from his visit to the gathering of coaches and officials in New York where were interpreted the football regulations.

The boys went through their second day of hard scrimmaging with much the same satisfactory results that were witnessed last Saturday by Bill Ormsby, the acting coach.

Frank Maloney, the Brighton boy who took such a fancy on the freshman eleven, gives promise of being another Tom Smith, great defensive back at B. C several years ago.

Gordon Conners and Eddie Anderson, the wingmen on last year's freshmen team, will be Ormsby's candidates for spares unless more promising material looms in for near future. Teal and Killelea will be the regular ends.

A real battle is being waged in these mountains for the second string center berth held at present by Greg Sullivan who is being pressed for honors by Randy Wise.

What gives evidence of another struggle will be the tackle fight between Dick Reynolds and Henry Plausse. Reynolds was the tackle last year when Plausse was on the ineligible list.

YALE PUTS TWO GAMES ON AIR

New Haven, Sept. 12 (AP)—Malcolm Farmer, graduate director of athletics, announced today that Yale will permit broadcasting of the Yale-Army and the Yale-Harvard football games.

The broadcasts from the bowl, he said, will be unsponsored and the costs will be borne by the broadcasting companies.

The Army game will be played Oct. 22 and the Harvard game Nov. 19.

A ban against broadcasting was imposed some time ago by the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Association. The ruling, however, was modified last week to permit members of the association to determine what games they will allow to go on the air.

Edward S. Elliott, director of athletics at Columbia University announced that broadcasting of all Lion football games would be permitted.

The Eastern Intercollegiate Association, of which Columbia is a member, voted Friday to allow individual schools to decide the question of radio broadcastings and rescinded a previous ban.

An unprecedented avalanche of entries for the Boston Evening American Hole-In One tournament, which will be played at Franklin Field starting Sept. 27, poured in over the week end.

Hundreds of entries have been received and indications are that the Hole-in-One tournament will establish an all time attendance record for open golf competition.

The Boston Evening American's Hole-in-One tournament is open to everyone, men and women, amateurs and professionals. The only restriction is on the question of age. In order to be eligible, entrants must have reached their 18th birthday.

THERE IS NO ENTRY FEE.

All that is required of the contestants is to fill out an entry blank and mail it to the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq.

The Boston Evening American is offering a fine array of prizes, which are both appropriate and valuable. The first prize, which will be awarded to the player who gets a hole in one or whose ball stops nearest the hole, will be an expensive sport wrist watch. The second award will be a complete set of clubs, three woods, nine irons and a golf bag. The third prize will be three wooden clubs, seven irons and a golf bag. The winner of the fourth prize will receive a sport suit from Kennedy's Store, the fifth three matched wooden clubs and the sixth five matched irons.

Corcoran will be assisted by a corps of capable assistants, including clerks, starters, markers and caddies. All shots which stop within the "Birdie Circle," which will be swung at a ten-foot radius, will be measured carefully and recorded. In the event there is no "ace," the player whose ball has stopped nearest to the cup will be adjudged the winner.

HOLE NEAR COMPLETION

The special hole which will be used during the Boston Evening American's Hole-In-One tournament is nearly completed. It will be located back of the first tee at Franklin Park, and will measure approximately 128 yards. It is a fine one shotter, one of the best, according to no less an authority than Joe Howe, the veteran superintendent at Franklin Park.

Until the Boston Evening American Hole-In-One tournament starts on Sept. 27, no player will be allowed to pratice at the special hole. It is within the rules to measure the hole and practice elsewhere but under no circumstances can anyone play to that green.

Due to the heavy daily list of entries, it is important that contestants specify the time most convenient for them to play. If you have not already entered, do so at once.

Further details of this unusual tournament will be published tomorrow and each succeeding day.

BABE STILL ON SICK LIST

New York, Sept. 12—With the World Series rapidly approaching, little of encouragement can be gleaned by Yankees' officials from the bulletins regarding the condition of Babe Ruth.

The Bam, who has been threatened for days with appendicitis, is at home and still is running a fever which has several times gone over the 100 point. Ice bags have been packed on his side, but the pains recur occasionally.

No report has been issued on the blood tests which were planned the other day to determine whether or not an operation would be necessary.

While it is hoped that conservative treatment will cause the inflammation to subside at least until after the series, the continued illness worries baseball fans the land over.

Ouimet Finishes First 18 Holes With Card of 78

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 12 (AP)—Johnny Fischer of Fort Thomas, Ky., intercollegiate champion from the University of Michigan, today shot into the lead in the first round of the United States amateur golf championship qualifying test with a 69, one under par.

Fiscer, a tremendous clouter and fine all-round shotmaker, had five birdies on his card. He climaxed his great round by holing a 15-foot putt for a birdie on the 18th green, to take the decision from old man par and the lead from Charley Yates, 19-year-old Georgia Tech sophomore, who had posted a 72.

MAKES COME BACK

Fischer, coming back, shot remarkable golf to win his first joust with par. The University of Michigan star dropped a stroke on the tenth where he got into the rough, and barely missed a six-foot putt on the 13th green.

These were his only mistakes and h offst thm by canning two 15-foot putts, on the 600-yard 14th hole, for a birdie four, and the other on the 18th for a birdie three.

Ouimet lacked his usual putting touch as he finished his first qualifying test in 78. His British rival, Tony Torrance, also was in considerable trouble and came in with an 80, endangering his chances of qualifying.

Two of the strong Oregon contingent, Johnny Robbins and Frank Delp, former Western titleholder, posted 74 and 76, respectively, to fortify themselves for the second half of the qualifying struggle tomorrow.

Francis H. I. Brown, the long-distance Honolulu player, rallied for a par-equalling 35 over the last nine, after a poor start, and registered a total of 76.

GOODMAN HAS 72

Johnny Goodman of Omaha moved into the front ranks with a 35—37—72, giving him a tie with Charley Yates, three strokes behind the pace-setting Fischer.

Two of the early casualties were a pair of Southern stars, Chandler Harper, Virginia open champion, and Sam Perry, of Birmingham, former Southern amateur titleholder. Harper, after two weird holes, was out in 44 and totaled 83 while Perry wound up his first round with an 84.

Johnny Goodman, the Omaha star who was best amateur in the 1932 national open, got off to a flying start with a 35 even par, for the first nine. He had a fine run on the 163-yard fourth but offset this by missing the ninth green from the tee.

Goodman out 4 4 4 2 4 5 4 4 4—35

OUIMET SHOOT 38

The defending champion, Francis Ouimet, despite a seven on the second hole, where he drove out of bounds, negotiated the first nine in 38, only three over par. His British rival, Tony Torrance, was out in 40.

Ouimet just missed holing a 35 footer for a deuce on the short fourth. His three was matched by Torrance. Both took fives on the fifth hole. Francis three-putting after Tony topped his drive and sliced his second into the rough. Ouimet sank a 25-footer on the long sixth for a birdie four and played the next three holes in par figures to reach the turn in 38, as compared with Torrance's 40.

Out

Ouimet .....4 7 4 3 5 4 4 4 3—38

Torrance ....5 4 5 3 5 5 5 4 4—40

Ouimet got into further trouble starting back. The champion drove into the rough on the tenth, played out safely and took a five.

On the 424-yard 11th hole Ouimet's drive landed in a ditch, serving as a parallel water hazard, and cost him a penalty stroke. He had to play his next short safely and took a six.

Torrance was 4-5 on these holes, missing the 11th green with his approach. They got orthodox fours on the 12th.

Ouimet just missed his putt for a birdie on the short 13th and got his par on the long 14th icely. Torrance dropped a stroke on each hole, hitting into a trap on the 13th and taking three putts on the next green.

Strack vs. Martin On Revere Mat

Charlie Strack, gunning for a chance for a return match with "Gentleman" Jack Washburn, will endeavor to wipe "Bull" Martin off the wrestling map tonight at Revere Beach.

Scotty Hawkins will receive the acid test at the hands of Count George Zarynoff in the semi-windup bout. Hawkins has yet to taste defeat since he invaded New England.

Benny Leonard to Second for Kirsch

New York, Sept. 12 (INS)—Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion, will act as second for Lew Kirsch, New York lightweight, when he meets Tony Canzoneri in an over-weight battle here tomorrow night.

He's only 38, is Francis Ouimet, but he's an old man to a lot of young golfers, still in their teens, who think his amateur championship crown would look better on one of them. So Ouimet's crown is on the line and he's defending beginning today at Five Farms, Baltimore.

MAX-MICKEY FIGHT SEPT. 23

Summit, N. J., Sept. 12 (US)—Mickey Walker and Max Schmeling will meet at the Madison Square Garden bowl on Friday night, September 23, four days later than the original date set for the Milk Fund fistic classic.

James J. Johnston, Madison Square Garden executive, who visited the camp here today in company with Dr. Edward C. Hoefnocker, boil specialist, advised Walker to agree to the postponed date, following an examination of the wound caused by lancing of a small boil just below Mickey's left elbow a week ago.

Dr. Hoefnocker advised a respite from boxing of two days to allow for necessary resting of the ailing member.

Johnston is to confer with Jacobs today and it is expected that the pilot of Max Schmeling will acquiesce.

JACOBS MAKES PROTEST

Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, hurried here from the former champion's camp at Speculator, N. Y., and said he would protest the postponement, but Garden executives said his protest would be ignored and the postponement ordered.

Walker devoted his training yesterday to shadow boxing and bag-punching. The boil has been lanced and the cut is rapidly healing, but Walker was not in condition to meet sparring mates.

HARVARD GRID SQUAD REPORTS THURSDAY

SPORTS

By BILL CORUM

TRAINING CAMPS, THEN AND NOW

Summit, N. J., Sept. 12—It is so quiet out here around Mickey Walker's training camp that you can hear the English "Clark" in the hotel where I am stopping dropping his "aitches" at his evening prayers. Now and then a fierce bridge or backgammon battle does flare forth around the fireplace in the lobby, but largely the guests confine themselves to a book or a sort of community jig-saw puzzle, which always seems just about to be solved, but never is.

Even as I write this I can stop the rickety old coffee mill that I use for a typewriter and hear the katy-dids trying to explain why in the velvet twilight outside my window. But while I find this peace and quiet soothing and good for me—I guess I will always be a country boy, listening for the whistle of far-away trains at night—I doubt if it is good for you readers and I am sure it is no good for the ballyhoo on this prize fight. You cannot ballyhoo a fight with the cricket on the hearth.

The truth is that the hoop-la has gone out of the ballyhoo business. And those who are trying to sustain it are blowing frosty breaths on cold ashes. This doesn't mean that fights won't draw any more. Barring the unforeseen, the coming fight (Walker-Schmeling) will find disappointed would-be customers with their money in their hands, beating on closed gates as they did when Sharkey and Schmeling fought.

But it does mean that the old-style ballyhoo is as dead as . . . as . . . as Summit, N. J., after 10 o'clock at night. Even old Doctor Kearns now goes to bed o'nights, and when the doctor takes to his cot before the break of day it is reasonable to assume that sleeping has become a national weakness.

The Current Situation :

I think nobody will deny that as heavyweight fights in this year of grace go, this is a big fight. The majority seem to think that Schmeling beat Sharkey and, therefore, that he is a better fighter than the rustic Squire of Chestnut Hill. Many thought that Mickey Walker did likewise and ditto a year ago at Ebbets Field. Thus a fight between Mick and Max must come pretty close to being the best available.

For a similar fight between Dempsey and Sharkey five years ago, or Dempsey and Tunney, or Tunney and Heeney, the training camps were bee-hives of activity for at least three weeks before the bout. The merest rumor about one of the principals was enough to make first page headlines and, on occasion, to threaten international complications.

Even at this late date I shudder to think what the consequences would have been had Tunney or Dempsey come up with a boil on the eve of Chicago's great civic cauliflower congress. Managing editors would have broken under the strain and sports writers would have turned gray overnight.

But here we have Mickey Walker with his best arm—the left—slashed below the knee with a cut the shape of a maltese cross because of a boil, and the general attitude appears to be that if he can't fight this week he can fight next. Under the same conditions in 1928 a man named Rickard would have had three doctors from Vienna in Walker's camp.

There would have been enough X-ray pictures on the sports pages to make them look like an operating room in a hospital, and fight fans in Oshkosh could have drawn a perfect picture of the wound with their eyes shut. Today the reaction is: So he's got a boil, eh, and what of it?

A Saner Attitude :

In writing this I mean to draw no invidious comparisons between those engaged in the boxing business five years ago and those engaged in it today. In many instances they are the same people. What I am trying to make clear is how the game has changed. Nobody is responsible. It is the steady march of time that has made the difference.

The fans still will go to see fights, but they no longer leap to the beat of the ballyhoo drums. New drums are indicated, or at least some new tunes to play on them.

That the present attitude is saner, I think nobody will question. After all, even in the golden era of the profound profession, the noble gladiators were no more than journeymen prizefighters drawing an exorbitant wage for what frequently turned out to be mediocre performances. Even the breath-taking discovery that Tunney read Shakespeare seems to have left the moon and the stars in approximately their accustomed orbits.

Figures a Lively Fracas :

Not even the seventh son of a seventh son born in the third quarter of the moon can forecast with accuracy how much action any sporting event will produce. But the best guess is that this Walker-Schmeling fight will be a corker as fig as it goes.

Schmeling seems to gait himself to the speed and style of his opponent. Against Risko, a fighter, Max fought. Against Sharkey, a boxer, he boxed. It was this willingness to play Sharkey's game that undoubtedly cost him his title.

Incidentally, I saw the pictures of this fight with Walker yesterday. It was the third time I had seen them and each time I become more firmly convinced of the justice of the decision. But what I was going to point out was that Schmeling goes along with the other fellow, and Walker will go in there to fight. Of that you may be sure. Oh, very, very sure.

And so to bed—again.

13 LETTERMEN REMAIN OF 1931 TEAM

The football spotlight focusses on Cambridge this week—on that particular section of the University city occupied by Soldiers Field.

From all parts of the country over a hundred grid candidates are answering the opening call for Harvard practice listed at the Stadium for Thursday morning, anticipating the opening of classes at the University by two weeks.

Carl H. Hageman, the Crimson's wingman, selected last fall to succeed All American Barry Wood as captain, is leading the way overland from Lorain, Illinois. And right along with Hageman comes Eddy Rogers, husky guard from Bellaire, Ill., who may play shoulder to shoulder with Hageman in the Crimson's unbalanced line.

From the far West and South hail James Esterly, varsity guard, of Minneapolis, Minn.; and Leon A. Francisco of Danville, Va., who opened the season a year ago on right end for the Crimson.

CRICKARD TO REPORT

Big Jack Crickard will make an overnight hop from New York City in time to draw his equipment on Wednesday, before the initial practice session opens. Most of the home town boys have already put in an appearance at Cambridge, and all the remaining lettermen promise to be on hand bright and early.

Irad Hardy, Waltham, tackle; Malcolm Bancroft, Cambridge, captain-elect of the varsity crew, and first string tackle; Roger Hallowell, center, of Beadville; John H. Dean of Cohasset, and Frank Gleason of Newton, both backs, are Greater Boston youths who were awarded letters last fall, and who are potential stars for the coming season.

13 LETTERMEN LEFT

Harry K. Wells, veteran quarterback, who is the favorite to succeed Wood as the varsity signal caller, entrains today at Gloucester, failing that mid-western state's contribution to the Harvard football fund to three. His main competitors for the first string job, James Leonard, of Pelham, N. Y., and Stanley Whitney, Red Bank, N. J., and Charles Nevins, Caldwell, N. J., have a shorter distance to travel and will not start until the end of the week.

With only these 13 lettermen left of the powerful squad he constructed last year, Head Coach Eddie Casey has a considerable task ahead.

JUMBO GRID WORK STARTS

With an extra game on its schedule, the Tufts college eleven starts work Wednesday for the first game on its schedule against Middlebury with but 13 days of practise. The Jumbo prospects are good except for ends, ten lettermen being available for other positions.

The backfield which probably will be used Wednesday morning in the first practise by Coach Lou Manley consists of Sammy Clayman, quarter, John McMahon and Bud Usnns, halves, and Kenneth Clark, fullback, each a letterman.

Sophomores who will contest for positions are Joe Redshaw, back, Roy Woodworth, back, and Ben Carlyn, center, all from Lynn, and Herman Tyrrell, back, who starred at Dean, and again last year for the Jumbo frosh.

As Coach Lou Manley starts his third year at Medford, he believes the prospects are better than last year except for the end material. He will have the same coaching staff, Charlie Hingston taking care of the backfield, while Sike Rachdorf will coach the line. Ralph Kendall of Medford high will assume his regular berth in assisting with the backfield.

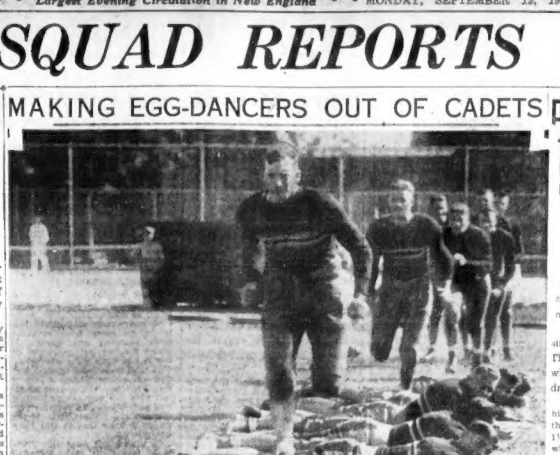
MAKING EGG-DANCERS OUT OF CADETS



Head Coach Sasse wants light-footed football players. So this is the way he expects to get them. And the runner will have to be light-footed (and fast) if he expects to get away from irate teammates should he step on them. This exercise will also teach the cadets whom not to step upon when they skid through a broken field. (International News Photos.)

BRAVES' ELEVEN IN SCRIMMAGE

Coach Lud Wray of the Boston Braves eleven planned to send his costly and capable athletes through their first scrimmage today at Lynn, where the club has rapidly become the appearance of a real football team.

Unlike college squad members, it took the individuals, all All Americans of the past few seasons, only a few days to become fugitives of each other's style and the plan of attack which Wray wants followed.

Today will be the first real test of the players. There are 15 contract men on the squad, and while they are quite sure of berths, the remaining positions are the goals of the other gridmen.

Wray's new and many offensives can be oiled into smooth working order today. Half and full spinners are running so well that it is difficult for spectators to follow the ball. It may reasonably be assumed that the foes of the Braves are going similarly to have a rough time trying to keep a line on Wray's heroes when the real battling starts.

Kearns Defeats Cahalan in Mile

John E. Kearns of the B. A. A defeated Bart Cahalan of the B. A. A. in the Mayor Thomas J. Mc-Grath one-mile run, feature event of the Kariu A. C. field day at Merrymount Park, Quincy.

Kearns finished in 4 minutes, 23 seconds.

Ethel O'Brien of the Boston Swimming Association, jumped 16 feet 3½ inches in the running broad jump for women, and won the N. E. A. A. A. U. junior championship.

Amateur Ring Show at Arena Friday

The Irish-American A. C. holds its first amateur boxing tournament of the season at the Boston Arena Friday night. Four classes, 147-lb., 160-lb., 175-lb. and the heavyweights are carded.

All entries may be sent th Jim Barry, Irish-American A. C. 282 Washington st., Boston, room 22.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Walter Cobb, one of the best punchers in the heavyweight division, and Les Kennedy of California, are expected to furnish quite a thumping duel when they mingle in a 10-round bout at an Angonne A. A. show at Fenway Park tomorrow night.

Cobb tips over mountains when he hits 'em with his left hook. Jack Sigmore of Cambridge was roaring to the top when he bumped into Cobb. In the first round Sigmore had Cobb on the floor. The latter got up and came on to win by a knockout.

Mr. Boston

It was left hooks to the body which wrecked Sigmore, in Kennedy, Cobb will be opposed by a more experienced boxer than was the case when he battled Sigmore. Kennedy has battled Max Baer and Dynamite Jackson. He will make Cobb realize it is in a real fight.

Eddie Mack will attempt to match the winner of the Cobb-Kennedy go with Isidore Gastanaga, young Spanish heavyweight who recently knocked out Charley Retzlaff only to later drop a duke to Hans Birkie.

• • •

Sharkey back in town

JACK SHARKEY was back in town today following a fishing trip to Maine. The world's heavyweight champion intends to resume training within a week or ten days to prevent himself from getting heavy.

Sharkey will go to New York to see the Schmeling-Walker bout which takes place a week from tonight. Jack realizes he will probably be called upon to meet the winner in a title defense go next June. Sharkey will not engage in other than exhibition matches before next June. His contract with the New York Garden does not allow him to box to a decision other than under its direction.

• • •

DAN CARROLL tells me Napoleon Jack Dorval has resumed training. Dorval has not appeared in a local ring since he won from Arthur Delkuh at the Arena. Dorval would like to get another shot at Ernie Schaaf. Dorval lost a close decision to Schaaf at the Garden last November.

Ruth's annuity

PHIL ROSENTHAL of the Equitable Life Insurance Company tells me Babe Ruth has purchased an annuity with that organization which will pay him $350 a week when he reaches the age of 50. Which should keep the Bambino and his family in comfort when Ruth loses his desire to act as a baseball manager. Babe, of course, will become a pilot when he ends his days as an active player.

BUCCS START SERIES HERE TOMORROW

By JOE CASHMAN

As long as they're aiming upward, our Braves have decided to aim high.

Fourth place, their objective since coming home, is no longer. They now plan to finish third, which would mean a few hundred dollars extra per man.

The Warriors can reach the higher berth almost as easily as they can attain the lowest, being 1½ games back of the Phils, with whom they have finished for the season, and only three games back of the Dodgers, whom they have beaten 14 times in 20 starts and with whom they still have two games to play.

Those two games remaining with the Brooklyn entry are what makes the natives hopeful they can break the tape third, if they ever land in fourth. They're confident that if they can pass the Phils and go into Flatbush less than two games back of the Careymen, they will capture those tilts on the last two afternoons of the season and walk off with third-place money.

TRIBE ON UP TRAIL

Sneaking past these Quakers promises to be quite a task for our heroes, yet they should come through if they can continue at the rate they've been traveling during their current stay at the Wigwam. They have played six even dozen games with the Phils, Dodgers, Cubs and Reds and have won eight of them.

Eleven games remain for the Tribesmen to play. If they can win seven, they should finish in the money, and six more victories will give them a mark of .500 for the season.

Already they have won seven games more and are certain to finish two points higher than last season. So no matter what they do from here in, their latest campaign must be called a big improvement over their 31 showing.

BUCCS HERE TOMORROW

The second-place Pirates, who arrive tomorrow for three games in as many afternoons, are the next visiting attraction at the Tepee.

The Cubs now have a lead of six full games. They may increase it to seven today. In that event, the Cubs will end here, providing the Braves clean up against the Corsairs and the leaders do likewise against the Giants, with whom they will be playing four games on those three days.

Even then the Cubs would be 10½ games in front with only 10 games to play.

CANTABS OPEN WITH SALEM SATURDAY

When the schoolboy grid season opens in half a hundred high schools in the Metropolitan Boston area this Saturday, some 4000 candidates will be in uniform.

A bumper crop of lettermen and veterans is the fortunate lot of most of the coaches in the various high school leagues. The race for the sectional championships, therefore, will be close than ever this season.

As usual, Melrose in the Mystic Valley league, will be watched as the chief eleven as it seeks to retain the Valley title which it won a year ago.

SALEM PLAYS SATURDAY

Salem High school, after weeks of preliminary training under Bill Broderick, starts the long grind with a curtain raiser with Cambridge Latin. The Cambridge boys were a little late getting started as Coach Leander McDonald was a spectator at the Olympics. Still a good opening game is expected when the University city and the Witch city elevens clash this week.

Medford High, where there are 200 candidates for the eleven and six lettermen including George Pacco in the lineup, has something of a pushover in St. James of Haverhill at Medford Saturday.

Medford's line is the chief worry of Coach Eddie Pigeon, who is making his debut at the North Shore school. He has an able assistant in Eddie Brooks, however, and Brooks is used to whipping an ordinary forward line into championship calibre in a few weeks.

CAPT. SODERBERG ILL

Brookline's hopes of producing a championship eleven went sky high when it was learned that Capt. Soderberg may have to undergo an appendix operation.

Newburyport High, one of the first of the high school squads to turn out this season opens with Johnson High, and Lawrence goes against Methuen and another fine opening game Saturday.

Gildea's Everett high eleven, with 33 veterans on the squad, figures to be one of the strongest around Boston. Gildea will employ the Notre Dame shift, which he learned at Coach Rockhildreth's Villanova coaching school this summer.

Malden opens with Lynn G. E. at the Malden stadium in a battle which should be a fine test of Coach Warren McGuirk's eleven of a year ago. This is McGuirk's second season at Malden, and in his first year he spent much time developing the scrubs for the 1932 season.

A new contender in the Mystic Valley league this season will be Winthrop high, which takes the place of Winchester high this season.

ALEXANDER IN BATTING LEAD

St. Louis, Sept. 12—Having played the contest scheduled for today as the quick end of a doubleheader, the Browns and Boston Red Sox will rest until tomorrow, when they'll meet for the third time in the current series and the last time this season.

The visitors are still hopeful of getting out of the cellar before the curtain falls. They were 7½ games back of White Sox last evening, their present invasion of the West. Now they are only 4½ games back with the trip less than half over. So they have some reason for thinking they can eventually squeeze by the Windy City outfit.

SOX FIGHTERS

If they fail, it's certain it won't be because they didn't hustle and fight. St. Louis fans never saw a snappier last-place outfit than the one Marty McManus, a local resident and a very popular one, fielded to hold the Browns even in the Sabbath bargain-bill.

The natives walked off with the opener behind the excellent pitching of Walter "Lefty" Stewart. T'ry but the Sox came right back and evened the count by grabbing the nightcap, 8 to 3.

Ivy Paul Andrews, who had to be left home suffering from tonsilitis when Sox started on the trip, showed up in time to take the hill and chalk up his eighth victory against six defeats.

Only a great pitcher can turn in that record with a .285 club and Bob Quinn must chuckle every time he thinks of the Yanks getting him the youngster in exchange for Danny MacFayden.

ALEXANDER LEADS

Big Dale Alexander, enemy first baseman, was held to one hit in four times up in the opener and was then informed that Jimmy Foxx, with whom he had been tied for the American League batting championship in the morning, had made two out of four against Detroit, including his 32nd homer.

"That so," drawled Dale. "Well, it looks as though I must show Jimmy how to hit in the next game."

And how he showed the Mackinaw slugger was just too bad for the Browns.

A home run and two doubles rolled off his big bat in four trips to the platter and today the averages read:

Alexander	.366
Foxx	.365

What the Stars Did

Jimmie Foxx, Athletics — His 32 homer with one on beat Tigers.

Wes Ferrell, Ondians—Halted Yakees with eight hits ad aided own cause with two singles.

Fred Marberry and Buddy Myer, Senators—Former held White Sox to six hits in opener; latter collected double and three singles in nightcap.

Dale Alexander, Red Sox — Clouted Brown pitching for home run and three doubles in two games, drove in four runs and scored four.

Carl Hubbell, Giants, and Gus Mancuso, Cardinals—Former allowed eight scattered hits in opener; latter's homer with one on won second game.

With Normie Sims ready and the City League championship within its grasp St. Thomas C. L. A. A. nine expects to settle the series for the title at Healy Field, Roslindale, tonight.

The Saints, winners of the first half, have won three games in Roslindale's two of the five games played thus far and a victory tonight will give them the crown.

Big handicaps in the St. Thomas' path are "Chick" Fraser, Roslindale pitcher, and a clash on Roslindale's home field where the home boys get the big hand and act accordingly.

FRASER WON FIRST

Sims and Fraser will be hooking up in their second mound duel. Fraser got the duke in the first, giving St. Thomas but four hits which was a masterly performance considering the hitting strength of the Saints.

But Sims, former Holy Cross diamond captain, is a boy who likes a bit of revenge now and then and wants to make up for Fraser defeat now on his books.

Some 12,000 fans turned out to see the Sabbath panic in which St. Thomas won, and just as large a crowd will be on hand tonight to see what may be the final game of this hectic series.

WALTHAM, ALLSTON WAR

If the City League series is wiped off the program tonight it will give the Boston Twilight League a clear field for the start of their title series between Waltham and Allston which opens tomorrow night at Allston.

The Hopedales (Allston) won both halves of the Boston Twilight championship while Waltham won a round-robin for runner-up clubs beating South Boston and Concord for the right to engage Allston in the championship series.

Allston will go into this series a big favorite but Waltham will give them plenty of trouble before the flring has ceased.

Fish and Game

—By WIN BROOKS—

By WIN BROOKS

From now until the snow flies (and that is almost literally true) the bass will be the main object of quest in Massachusetts waters. The cool weather brings the big fellows back from the depths within range of the fly fisherman and when bass are coming to the fly, paradise is not a long distance over the horizon.

One of the most glorious days of my own experience with flies and the small-mouth occurred on Great Pond in Maine, three years ago when, on a late June day, fishing with George Nutter as guide, I brought 68 bass to net. I kept three. I started with a Parmachenee Belle and a Western Bee and I never changed. The fish were not large; none was over two and one-half pounds. But they were coming fast with occasional double.

Having dispensed with the ego (as my wife, who reads the column religiously, seeking exaggerations, often remarks), I can now proceed to record a phone call from Charlie Ives, who is back in Boston after a good summer's fishing at Lake Sunapee. Ives has been taking bass out of Sunapee on the fly for two weeks, fishing in the cool of the late afternoon. "A white fly at dusk does the trick," he assures me.

* * *

I have watched a lot of district attorneys in action in a lot of courtrooms and I've often had the idea they'd be grand fishermen. The former Middlesex prosecutor, Robert T. Bushnell comes forward as proof positive truth of this conjecture. He is back whipping the muddy waters of the Medford Trout Club and getting the Buzzards Bay bluefish particular merry for two weeks.

* * *

Al Vorenberg of Quincy, Ray McAdams of Forest Hills and Gus Williams of South Braintree also enjoyed an impressive night of Marion in Buzzards Bay last week. With the surface of the bay almost a flat calm a huge school of blues appeared close to the boat from which they were trolling.

There is no possibility of making an accurate estimate of the number of fish in such a school, but Williams said if there weren't 10,000 he'd eat squid. They caught five on the Jap feathers before they vanished, and spent the rest of the afternoon trying to figure out the percentage of their catch to the available fish.

* * *

Danny Linehan, Brookline fireman, and Charlie Mooney, Somerville veteran of the telegraph key, did fairly well with the bass in Contoocook river. "That is, I did," Linehan qualified.

* * *

And Edward F. Dargin, secretary of the Province of Essex County Sportsmen's Clubs, sends a note warning me to be sure and not miss the league's field day at Georgetown on Saturday. Skeet, trap, archery and a lot of other good things on the program.

Five grilse and a 10-pound salmon were brought to gaff on the Miramichi in New Brunswick last Wednesday by Mrs. E. N. Davis, of Middleton, Ct. She hooked a sixth grilse and lost him, while her husband cheered. John H. Perry, of New Canaaait, Ct., and his son, Samuel and John are also salmon fishing on the Miramichi.

FILENE'S NINE IS VICTOR

Filene's nine in the second inning made a five-run rally to capture the opening game of the series for the Retail Stores Sports League baseball championship by defeating Houghton & Dutton, 6 to 3, at Fenway Park.

Charley Warren beat out a bunt, and went to third on Eddie McElaney's single. Bart Nichols, Tom McDonald and Jim Smith were passed in succession, forcing two runs across. Henry Fredey doubled to clean the bases.

The second game will be played at Fenway Park next Sunday.

VINES IS REAL SUCCESSOR TO TILDEN

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—In his prime, Big Billy Tilden was called the "greatest tennis players who ever lived" but already a successor has arisen who threatens to eclipse the Philadelphian's most spectacular records.

Ellsworth Vines, using the same withering speed that made Tilden famous, definitely earned top ranking among the world's players on Saturday when he trounced Henri Cochet in straight sets to win the national championship for the second time in as many years.

It was Vines' second victory over the great Frenchman in six weeks and climaxed the most successful season any American player has enjoyed since Tilden was at his best.

WON AT WIMBLEDON

He sailed through a great international field at Wimbledon to capture the British championship; beat Cochet in the Davis Cup challenge round; won the national doubles title with Keith Gledhill, and won the only grass court tournament in which he competed in the United States this year.

The Pasadena youngster already has bettered Tilden's record in two respects. He was only 19 when he won the national title last year, and thus only 2 when he accomplished his feat this season of winning both the British and American championship in the same year.

TILDEN TITLIST AT 27

Tilden was 27 years old when he won the United States and British titles in 1920 and that year also marked the first time Big Bill could crash through to the American title.

Several of Tilden's greatest achievements, however, will remain unbroken at least for some years.

Vines will have to win the national title four times in a row next four years to equal Tilden's feat of capturing it six times in succession, from 1920 through 1925, and the Californian will have to win it five more times before he can equal Tilden's record of seven national championships.

WILL MAY GIVE BERN SUICIDE MOTIVE

written to "Miss Dorothy Millette" in New York City six months before he shot himself and four months before he married Miss Harlow.

One of the letters was written by Bern on March 29 to Miss Millette, whom he supported in comparative luxury for more than a decade, addressed to her at the Algonquin Hotel, New York. It said:

PROMISED FUNDS

"Dear Dorothy:

"I was very happy to get your letter of March 17.

"I have been desperately trying to get away from here for both vacation and change of scene for the last year, but so far it has been quite impossible.

"I read with great interest that you are contemplating a trip to San Francisco. Of course, I would give you any advice because you yourself can be the only person to know what is best. If you do go I hope that it will be a happy change.

"I understand that the Plaza Hotel is a fairly reasonable and attractive one.

"If you do change to any other place we will find some way of supplying you with funds in a manner convenient to you.

"My love and best wishes always,

"PAUL."

"P. S. The Cliff Hotel is, I believe, quite fashionable and not very expensive."

LETTER FROM SECRETARY

That Bern had a definite financial arrangement with Miss Millette is shown by a letter from Irene Harrison, his secretary, dated May 12 and addressed to Miss Millette at the Plaza Hotel, San Francisco, as follows:

'Dear Miss Millette:

"According to the arrangement agreed upon, I am enclosing a money order for $150 due on May 15.

"Mr. Bern has already left on his vacation, but I am at the office in meantime, and if I can help you at any time, please don't hesitate to ask me.

"I hope you are comfortably and happily settled in your new home.

Sincerely yours,
"Irene Harrison,
"Secretary to Mr. Bern."

HAPPY TO HEAR

In one of the other letters writ ten two years ago Bern discussed business and financial conditions briefly, adding, "consequently, I don't think that you should come out here now."

Another letter, dated two weeks previously said:

"I was really very happy to get your note of the 16th, because it is so very long since I heard from you. Particularly was I happy to know that you are in relatively good health."

ENIGMATIC WORD

On a blotter of her writing pad, stamped in reverse order, was the one enigmatic word—"justification." There was no indication of what the word referred to, but police expressed the opinion it was blotted from a note or letter written shortly before the woman left the hotel.

As her belongings were examined here, Sacramento authorities disclosed the fact that the woman who allegedly lived with Bern as his wife 10 years ago. Their operations were confined to a 20-mile stretch.

Miss Harlow's attorney promised a statement after conferring with the widow, her stepfather, Mario Rello, and Bern's brother, Henry. The attorney said he believed the producer's will is in a Los Angeles bank deposit box and it may be opened today.

ROBINS MYSTERY DEEPER

attorney and life long friend of the missing crusader.

That the disappearance would be seized upon by the drys in the coming campaign was indicated in remarks of Levinson as well as Roy C. Haines, prominent for many years in social uplift movements and a close personal friend of Col. Robins.

Levinson expressed the opinion that if the colonel had been kidnaped or slain as the result of threats made to him because of his activities against the liquor traffic, "the wets have much responsibility in connection with the case.

FAVORED REPEAL

It was admitted among the dys here, however, that Colonel Robins was not recorded against repeal. He readily admitted the failure of the Eighteenth Amendment.

His wife, discussing her husband's beliefs, said that he was satisfied the prohibition law had fallen short of accomplishing what its proponents had expected. It was her husband's purpose, Mrs. Robins said, to aid in framing new liquor regulations under government supervision which would provide protection for states voting dry.

Mrs. Robins today scored the statement of Amos W. W. Woodcock, national prohibition administrator, who said he believed Robins was a victim of amnesia.

REPLY TO DRYS

Representing the wet leaders in this section, Miss Bell Gurnee, socially prominent in New York and Washington, replied to the attacks of the drys who have placed partial blame for the disappearance to wet propaganda.

"It is silly for our dry friends to involve republicans in the unfortunate disappearance of Col. Robins," Miss Gurnee said. "They might at least wait until the truth is established."

Word here was that at the special request of department of justice officials, Boston police today began a search for Col. Robins. A message said the missing man may be found in some cheap lodging house. Police were ordered to make diligent inquiries at all hospitals, lodging houses and places where a "down-and-outer" may congregate.

Dr. Poling Reveals Gang Threats Against Robins

Chicago, Sept. 12 (AP)—A sinister underworld underworld members may have been responsible for the disappearance of Col. Raymond Robins came today from Dr. Daniel A. Poling, head of the Allied Prohibition forces.

Dr. Poling said he had "several new leads" in the search, and that among them was a "series of threats against Col. Robins by underworld characters of the midwest."

FATHER OUT TO SEE 3 BURIED

But right now the deer season is closed and whether a man and his wife and his six children are hungry makes no difference in the face of the law if he possesses deer meat out of season.

So they seized the deer meat and they seized Theriault, having discovered he was happy because his family had something to eat, not because he was rolling up a fortune making beer.

They took Theriault to Bangor. They questioned him.

The venison, he said, was given him by a man who pitied his family because his family had little to eat.

WON'T BE TRAITOR

Who was he?

"That," said Theriault, "I will not tell. He was a good man to me."

They continued to question him and he continued to refuse to name the man who had befriended him outside the law so finally they put him in court, fined him $23 and costs, which amounted to $20 more, and took him to Bangor jail for 30 days because, of course, he couldn't pay.

Sheriff Boynton and Game Warden Davis took him to jail and Davis' son, Fred, also aided in this. Perhaps they thought Theriault might get away, snatch back his venison, dash home with it and have it fed to his children before the law could get him.

BLAMES AVENGING LAW

They got him safely in jail. And as the cell door swung on him the phone rang in Sheriff Farrar's office and a voice said:

"Tell that new prisoner, Theriault, that three of his children just burned to death in his wood-shed."

They told him. The neighbors who had befriended him got some money together and bailed him out then so he could go home for the funeral at least and when the state got its ball money the state let Theriault out.

Lazime Theriault went home and flung himself on the easiest wherein rest the pitifully few remains of his three little ones.

"If I had been home they would still be alive," he wailed.

Perhaps they would.

"If they hadn't taken me away, they would never have died," he cried.

Perhaps that is so.

But they had to take him away. Didn't he have a piece of deer meat out of season?

And besides, he might have been making beer and if he was making beer that arrest will certainly teach him not to make beer any more.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

It is becoming gravely evident that the much heralded armistice between the Shuberts and the theatrical forces known as the Erlangers has not totally arrested hostilities. The Independent producer insists upon having his inning. In plainer words he proposes to have something to say about the booking of his attractions regardless of any private arrangements entered upon which concern an amalgamation of the Shuberts and the Erlangers.

* * *

An Ultimatum

Within the week Charles G. Stewart, general manager for Laurence Rivera, Inc., producers of "The Green Pastures," called Augustus Pitou on the telephone from the Colonial and in vigorous language informed that gentleman that while on tour, "The Green Pastures" would not play any theaters in which the Shuberts were interested. Mr. Pitou, it may be explained, is the booking representative of the Erlanger group of playhouses and is generally supposed to have a working agreement with the Shuberts through which travelling attractions may be routed over either circuit. Mr. Stewart does not accept this arrangement; he will exhibit "The Green Pastures" only in Erlanger theaters. Otherwise, he declares, the negroid classic will be shown in municipal auditoriums, tents—or even in public squares.

* * *

Now comes another wrathful independent operator, with tears flowing down his cheeks and bitterness on his tongue. He is Arthur J. Beckhard, sponsor of "Another Language," a play which last season tipped New York on its ears, and which has good reason to expect similar reaction on the road this season. Mr. Beckhard complains that the American theater Society has included "Another Language" in its list of subscription items and he hastens to reject it. "Another Language," he insists, will be played independently under his own direction and with no subscription list attachments.

* * *

Not on the List

Regardless of what may have been done in other cities, the local branch of the American Theater Society has not placed "Another Language" in its season's prospectus. The A. T. S., as it is known, is an amalgamation of the Professional Players, and the Theater Guild plan of selling the drama at wholesale, with prices scaled accordingly. The season at the Plymouth is practically filled and the list of attractions already announced by Rebekah Hobbs, chief of local operations, contains no mention of "Another Language." Mr. Beckhard's play, by the way, was recently tuned up for the road with a week's work-out at West Falmouth.

WIFTLY FLIES TIME WHEN TALENT CHARMS

Bunny Bronson, toe dancer featured in the revue, "Discoveries," now on the Metropolitan's stage. Star of the show is Trixie Friganza, perennially youthful oldtimer who is surrounded by abundant talent.

Thelma Todd, given over to rollicking fun in the comedy, "Show Business," now on the Loew's State screen.

Howard Star

"The new burlesque show at the Old Howard is "Rarin to Go," an Empire traveling attraction with Georgia Sothern as the added attraction. The comedy is in the hands of Harry Bentley and Billy Hagen. Connie Fanalau is a clever Miss and Mary Noelisa singer and violinist. Other stars are Milt Bronson, Yi Buckley, Bob Rogers and Joe Pierce.

Carnival of Fun Directed by Olsen and Johnson on Keith's Stage

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

All Bedlam breaks loose at RKO Keith's this week. With a sort of "nuts to you" gesture, Olsen and Johnson lead their "merry madmen" through a carnival of fun that soon has the audience by its ears. In some ways the footlight fare—if such it can be called—is unique, for the participants in the battle of wits and the seemingly witless, spring up in all parts of the theater, dash hither and yon and generally live up to the title of the show, "Atrocities of 1932."

"Okay America" is the screen feature, another picture about the adventures of a columnist. This one has New Orleans as the writer, dabbling into everybody's affairs and running afoul of the gangsters, of course. He gets to the point of thinking himself a little Napoleon.

The story is sinking into the deepest sort of melee-drama. The action turns and twists, the hero gets into perils galore, and finally he is at bay. But he wins —the laws is set free; hence he can cry out, "Okay America," as he is ending his broadcast because a gangster bullet strikes him down, even before the "mike."

Of the cast Maureen O'Sullivan is fine, her characterization that of the hero's secretary being charmingly drawn. Walter Catlett furnishes many laughs. Louis Calhern is excellent as an underworld chap. Young Ayres starts off well, but loses his way, and winds up without conviction that he is the character he pretends to be.

Comics Run Riot

But the stage show more than makes up for any film deficiencies. A host of good comedians aid Olsen and Johnson—all brands of comics, with much other fine talent thrown in. These performers are planted all over the house; and all of a sudden they are jumping up like nobody's business, romping up and down the aisles, headed for nowhere in particular, but putting across a show that is one of the merriest and maddest we ever did see.

Unknowns Given Chance to Play Leading Roles

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 12—Attention unknowns! Here's a chance for all of Hollywood's undiscovered stars. Winnie Sheehan, impressed by the tremendous revenue currently garnered by authentic wild animal films, has put Clyde E. Elliott, director of "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and James O. Upearing, scenario writer, under contract. They'll make a yarn called "Man Hunt," dealing with a big game expedition into the Malayan jungles, with every foot of the picture actually shot in the Malayan hinterland.

Harriet Parsons

Only three white actors will appear in the film—and these three are yet to be found. A boy of the Johnny Weissmuller type, a girl (an Irene Rich-at-20 or Irene Dunne type; aristocratic, but courageous enough to look a gift tiger in the mouth) and a sophisticated light-heavy, a villain, but attractive enough to give the hero some romantic competition.

* * *

Contracts at Last

Long term tickets have been handed to Aline MacMahon and McHugh by Warners. Both have scored in countless Warner films but have never had contracts till now. . . . Miss MacMahon was signed on the strength of her excellent work as Eddie Robinson's first wife in "Silver Dollar." Not to mention her earlier outstanding characterizations as the dry-voiced secretary in "Five Star Final," the sympathetic nurse in "Life Begins" and her memorable May Daroda in Universal's "Once in a Lifetime." First role under the new arrangement will be in "Women in Prison." McHugh was in all the early Warner musicals, is particularly funny as a falling down drunk.

* * *

Richman to Return

In one of her more lucid moments (or was it?) before boarding the Europa, my rambling correspondent, temporarily sex-columnist Lounla Parsons, came through with a piece of news. Her wire informs me that Harry Richman is planning to return to the screen. He'll make a semi-musical for Paramount, in which he'll sing.

* * *

Joins Clara Bow

Estelle Taylor's fine portrayal of the tragic romantic-secretary Anna Maurant in "Street Scene" seems to have started something. Estelle, you'll remember, played Sylvia Sidney's mother. Were it not for "Street Scene" it would be difficult to imagine the young and glamorous Estelle playing the mother of a grown daughter. But with such convincing proof before them Fox has signed her for the role of Clara Bow's mama in "Call Her Savage."

Snapshots of Hollywood

BARBARA BEBE LYON celebrated her first birthday with one of the swankiest parties this man's town has ever seen. Guest list of miniature celebrities including IRVING (STARTLING BLOND) THALBERG, JR. REGINALD DENNY, JR. GARDNER SULLIVAN, JR., "DUKE" (SKEETS JUNIOR) GALLAGHER, DARRIEN ZANUCK, CAROL (ROSABELLE LAEMMLE) BERGERMAN, JUDITH (EDITH MAYER) GOETZ, MARY ELIZABETH (JOE E.) BROWN, SHEILA AND PATRICIA (GEORGE) FITZMAURICE, MARTHA ELLEN (HENRY) KING, and TOMMY (HARRY) SPITZER and HARLAN) THOMPSON; average age one year. A snappy luncheon of Zwieback a la Van Dine, and slightly sweet), cereal, and milk cocktail a la bib being served in the Danielle-Lyon playroom. Scandal notes: DUKE GALLAGHER openly making a play for MARTHA ELLEN LYON. Casualties: one long red scratch on TOMMY'S THOMPSON'S face, implanted by CAROL (PANTHER WOMAN) BERGERMAN. (What beloved executives's granddaughter tried caveswoman tactics on the son of a famed scenario writer with a novelist wife?) JOAN CRAWFORD, beautiful and breathless, at the opening of "Rain" in a coat that was a cross between a West Point dress uniform and a gay nineties bicycling outfit. That's all today. Tomorrow's another one.

Negro Troupe Held Over

Stepin Fetchit and the rest of the stars in Leonard Harper's Cotton Club Floor Show, are held for the second week at the Scollay Square of records broke during the first week. It is the first time Manager Elliston Vinson has retained a show.

Manager Vinson announced that for the next week the company would have an entirely new program of songs, comedy and dances.

"Back Street" on Boston Bill

By HARRIS MORGAN

So good is the picture, "Back Street," that one gladly sits through its showing the second time. It is a quality movie, losing nothing of its power to grip and hold the interest. The film is now featured at the RKO Boston.

The Boston backs up the photoplay with a good vaudeville bill, topped by the Rimacs, Cuban dancers, and worth the place. The band is particularly good, dispensing numbers generously and effectively. A trio of dancers excel. The act goes over big.

Alice Frohman entertains with upindate songs, all well received. Her accompanist is Jack Goodwin, ably assisting his star. Mirth is the order from the Bellings, Clemons and his sisters. The Cole Brothers step it off with speed, and toss in much comedy to the delight of the audience. Harry Welch and Harry Hills appear in "Two Eggs," and the Kam Ta Trio of Chinese performers score a hit.

Chevalier Film on Two Bills

The new program at the Fenway and Modern features the Maurice Chevalier picture, "Love Me Tonight," a highly diverting film, and "The Thrill of Youth." The latter is a tale of modern life, with age clashing with youth at various angles. The theme is made entertaining by excellent direction and the acting of June Clyde, Dorothy Peterson, and others.

Chevalier has able support in his movie, in the work of C. Aubrey Smith, Charlie Ruggles, Charles Butterworth, and Jeannette MacDonald.

"White Zombie" Tops Bowdoin Screen Fare

THE VOICE OF Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Prattle and Tattle!

D. W. Griffith has frustrated a $100,000 blackmail shakedown by turning the tables on one of the principals, an ex-convict. In the meantime, several leading Hollywood celebrities are huddling with the d. a. in an attempt to dynamite a well-established blackmail ring. Christine Maple, one of the three beauties brought here from California by the late Ziegfeld, her blazing romance with Doc Berson having chilled, is now carrying the flaming ember for Bert Taylor, with or without the consent of the former copyright owner, Lupe Velez. Christine, by the way is the only one of the three aforementioned beauties who is still unshackled matrimonially, Virginia Bruce having snared John Gilbert and Claire Dodds, a wealthy lad whose name escapes me. Blonde Leslie May, diminutive showgal, who eloped with Allen Bane a few months ago, is now having the bonds annulled. Those of us who remained in Manhattan over the holidays had a peaceful time, but it wasn't so peaceful over at the Ross Fenton farms in Asbury Park, when a misunderstanding between the parties at adjoining tables, resulted in a bottle throwing contest from which several of the pulchritudinous frills of Broadway emerged with cut lips and bruised shins and chins. Some talk around the street that the Mayfair may not resume its Satty nite shindigs, in which case, the Pierrette group will have the field to itself. The Richard Dixes, of the flicker Dixes, who are shopping for a bassinet, will tenant it in March, and Joan Castle, the Broadway beauty, is having her delicate schnozzle chiseled into a tilt by plastic surgery for no good reason. Incidentally, Diane and Dario, the St. Regis dancers, will also undergo feature-sculpting shortly for the sake of their art and a possible movie contract.

Most of Manhattan's ace by-liners will assemble in Winston-Salem for Libby Holman's trial next month and in the meantime rumors persist that just preceding Reynolds' death, all the servants were dismissed for the day by Reynolds himself. I've never come closer to a feeling of nausea than I did the other night when at the Strand, half the audience began hissing when the picture of the resigned and ailing Jimmy Walker were flashed on the screen, for I can remember when a showing of the familiar Walker features was always the signal for applause by the same people. Ben Franklin knew his mobs evidently when he wrote: "Applause waits on success; the fickle multitude, like the light straw that floats along the stream, glides with the current still, and follows fortune." This department's appeal for a helping hand for the penniless and homeless Broadway gals has brought a generous offer from the management of one well known hotel which has set aside a certain number of single rooms and bath in which a few of the girls may stay until they get a break. He asks no publicity. Also an offer from Ethel Holden, 125 W. 53d St., who promises jobs to ten girls who have had chorus experience. A fair salary will be paid. Ford Bond, the announcer, will be a pappy soon and I haven't been able to discover the reason for the feud between James Montgomery Flagg and Will Rogers.

Robert Armstrong, the cinemagun, and Jeanne, his divorced wife, are Purring and Cooing again and Sandy Goodwin, the gal on those "Okay Misa America" ads doesn't smoke. As you might expect, Broadway now insists that the Vallee-Webb break-up and reconciliation was all a monster publicity plot—which is just so much malarkey—for it's the one thing that almost broke the Vallee heart—that any woman should think of giving him up. Helen Ford and her producer hubby are preparing to sever the Tie That Binds, which signals the end of another famous romance. Henry Souvaine, the composer, and bosom pal of F. P. A., fractured a bone in his foot, playing tennis and the famous Jack Kennedy's, after being closed for about 4 months, reopens. The most elaborate private bar-room in the city is located in the triplex penthouse just leased by Joe Rosenbaum, the cotton broker and amateur aviator. Sam Shipman and John B. Hymer have returned from Maine with the script of their new play—still untitled—in which a composite columnist is exposed. What another? Billy (Warner Bros.) Kasson and Grace Klondel are pealing and another mag is scheduled for the stands shortly tagged, "The Gay Book" with Will Kofoed, brother of the sports scribe, as editor. Another snicker, Zeppo Marx, the stooge of the quartet, rides around in an elaborate Rolls-Royce while Groucho, the brains, puffs along in a Ford.

Clap Calloused Mitts for a fascinating and hilarious autobiography by the witty Addison Mizner—"The Many Mizners"—and for the straight-from-the-shoulder wallops at certain hifalutin' ladies and gents in "More Merry-Go-Round"; for the Great Garbo skit in the lively musical "Ballyhoo" at the 44th Street Theater and the twirling Gloria Gilbert who practically stopped the show; the blase manner in which A. C. Blumenthal now scrawls off his signature for the autographiends and Decker's cartoon on p. 24 of last wk.'s N'Yawker,—a prisoner receiving notification from his dentist that it's time he came around for an examination of his teeth.

The hoity-toity Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte has a "mad-on" at the society eds of the local rags—and are they disturbed; Don't h'esk! Marilyn Miller is heart-free again and here's something that's occurred to me. Fay Webb, touted as a movie "discovery," has never been seen in a movie—the nearest thing to it being the time she appeared in a picture, "Telling the World," with Bill Haines, in a scene where a pair of man's legs were seen following a girl's legs. The girl's legs were Fay's.

VOTING IN TEN STATES

By the Associated Press.

The voters of 10 states as far flung as Washington and Maine write their story of X's this week.

Maine was first, holding its State election today, two months ahead of most of the country.

Primary elections will be held tomorrow in Arizona, Colorado, Louisiana, Michigan New Hampshire, Vermont, Washington and South Carolina.

The prohibition issue arises in Michigan, as two former congressmen, Cramton and Hudson, seek Republican nominations. Each was an active prohibitionist, and each was defeated two years ago by an anti-prohibitionist.

In Washington Senator Jones, author of the "Five and Ten" law, is opposed for renomination by Adam Bexler.

Senator Huey Long, in Louisiana, has campaigned vigorously against renomination of Senator Broussard and in favor of Rep. Overton.

In Vermont, Sen. Porter H. Dale, Republican, is unopposed. Fred C. Martin, also unopposed, will be his Democratic opponent. Prohibition has been a topic of the campaign of Cong. Ernest W. Gibson and Loren R. Pierce for Republican nomination for Vermont's single seat in the House. Gibson advocates resubmission. Pierce has urged repeal.

New Hampshire's senior senator, George H. Moses, has spent little time campaigning for renomination. He is unopposed save by Joseph L. Richards, new to New Hampshire politics, who has asked voters to write in his name on the ballot. He failed to file in time to have his name appear.

In Arizona the seven-times governor, George W. P. Hunt, 73, will have four opponents for the nomination. Registration is four to one as regards Democrats and Republicans, but for the first time Republicans are placing a full ticket in the field.

In Colorado candidates for the unexpired term of the late Senator Waterman and for the full term of six years are to be named.

In South Carolina the voting is on the question of whether Senator E. D. (Cotton Ed) Smith or former Senator Cole L. Blease will be the Democratic candidate for the seat now held by Smith.

On Wednesday Cong. Crisp and Gov. Russell will contest in Georgia for the nomination for Senator on the Democratic ticket.

The Independent Republican party of Connecticut, pledged to oppose the re-election of Senator Hiram Bingham, will hold its state convention Saturday in New Haven. Albert Levitt, acting chairman, said the same presidential electors named by the Republican convention last week will be nominated by the Independents.

DEMOCRATS SEE VICTORY HOPE IN MAINE

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Portland, Me., Sept. 12—Some 200,000 men and women of Maine are trekking to the polls today in Maine's interesting, sensational and strategic election with the first reasonable prospect of a Democratic victory in 81 years.

They are electing a governor, both branches of the legislature, all the county officers and the three congressmen from the Pine Tree state.

NATION WIDE INTEREST

This test election commands national interest. The customary, overwhelming Republican victory will be interpreted as an indorsement of President Hoover in this presidential year. Anything less will be interpreted by the Democrats of the nation as a rebuke to him and a repudiation of his policies.

Chairman Daniel F. Field, of the Republican state committee, checked up the last report from his precinct workers in the vast reaches of this commonwealth and affirms that the G. O. P. will win by 20,000.

Chairman John H. Dooley, of the Democratic state committee, scanned the last of the glowing reports to reach his desk, and with an optimism strange to Maine, coolly predicted that the Democrats will elect their governor by 20,000 and at least one of the three congressmen while capturing at least three of the counties.

The Democrats have carried the state only once for President since reconstruction days, Wilson got 51,000 votes in the Bull Moose year of 1912 and secured the electoral college vote but Roosevelt and Taft polled a joint total of 75,000.

The Democrats have not won the state contest in a presidential year. The late Oakley C. Curtis, the last Democrat to sit in the governor's chair at Augusta, squeezed by with a majority of 3189 in 1914, a year when the national issues were discarded.

Yet the Democrats are confident, cheerfully and optimistically so. In my judgment (which I have been asked to state) they have reason to be.

Maine, in common with the other commonwealths of the Union, has suffered the depression. Men are out of work. Her lumber industry has been damaged by lack of a tariff on pulp in the tariff bill, which happened to have ruined her export commerce while holding the door open to the pulp imports from low labor price countries.

POTATOES DOWN

Aroostook potatoes are selling for 35 cents a barrel, against the normal price of $1.50 and corn for five cents a dozen is said by the farmer to be not worth picking and scarcely worth using for hog fodder.

The invading Democratic orators, headed by Senator David I. Walsh, ex-Senator Robert L. Owen and Governor Ely of Massachusetts have sought to engender the belief that Mr. Hoover's alleged ineptitude has prolonged the return to normalcy. Their rallies have been extraordinary in size and enthusiasm.

Against this, the Republican rallies have been frankly disappointing and unenthusiastic. The Republican orators, with an administration to defend, have been fighting on the retreat. The rally addressed by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills here Saturday night was the smallest in attendance and the coldest in enthusiasm which has been seen in years.

Several hundred voters have been erased from the voting lists, notably in Democratic cities under a law 101 years old which condemns as paupers, devoid of political rights, any citizen who accepts aid from the public treasury within 90 days of an election. Further, the Republicans are charged with having distributed in some towns more absent voter ballots than there are actual voters.

The candidates for governor are: Burleigh Martin, Republican, who is president of the Maine senate, and Judge Louis J. Brann, Democrat, five times mayor of Lewiston and who voted against ratification of national prohibition when he was a member of the Maine legislature.

Second district—John E. Nelson, Republican, seeking re-election and against whom charges of nepotism has been uttered; Edwin C. Moran, Jr., Democrat, twice his party's unsuccessful nominee for governor; Frederick P. oBney, Independent-Republican.

Third district—Ralph O. Brewster, Republican, ex-governor of Maine, and John Utterbach, ex-mayor of Bangor, the city associated in the famous story of hesitation with Maine lumberjack, who said, "I'm going down to Bangor and get drunk, and Lord how I dread it."

The Republicans are waiting for the returns to come in tonight, and Lord how they dread it.

Analysis of Nation-Wide Poll By Hearst Newspapers on Presidential Candidates

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for Presidena Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in cooperation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

It also shows the majority each candidate has in each State in which he is leading.

In addition, it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each State, as compared with the last preceding report from the State. These State reports are usually a week apart.

The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each State where he has improved his position, as compared with the last preceding report from that State.

HOOVER FAILS TO CUT LEAD OF ROOSEVELT

By COLE E. MORGAN

Washington, Sept. 12 (UP)—With the swing of the presidential campaign well into September it is beginning to shake down to something approaching solid ground. Early indications that were inclined to reflect the extremes of political sentiment are giving way from week to week to campaign actualities.

This is the conclusion to be drawn from a careful and continuing study of returns in the nationwide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in cooperation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

HOOVER CREEPING UP

In the first analysis of returns in the present poll, when there had been a comparatively small section of the voters canvassed, Governor Roosevelt started off with a 63 per cent advantage against 37 for President Hoover. A week later this had turned to 64-36 in Roosevelt's favor.

With the third week's returns the percentage shifted to 62-38 for Roosevelt. The fourth week resulted in a 60-40 division. Today sees a further adjustment, with the percentage moving to 59-41.

In the poll returns tabulated last week, President Hoover cut down the Roosevelt percentages in 21 states. Roosevelt reduced the Hoover percentages in seven states. In the other 20 states the percentages were unchanged. In 16 of these Roosevelt is leading.

The net result is that with the new week's returns Roosevelt held his own or improved his position in 28 states and Hoover held his own or improved his position in 25 states.

TWO STATES DOUBTFUL

A week ago Roosevelt had to his credit a potential electoral vote of 285 in states where he was showing 60 per cent or more of the poll response. Today he has 269, a loss of 16. This was brought about by the shifting of Minnesota and Oregon from safe Roosevelt states to doubtful states with Roosevelt leaning. The 269 potentially safe votes Roosevelt now holds gives him three more than the 266 electoral votes necessary to elect.

Hoover, on the other hand has only 37, the same as a week ago in his potentially safe column. The remaining 225 of the 531 total electoral votes are in states giving neither candidate 60 per cent or states with 108 votes.

Roosevelt Train to Carry Large Electric Sign

Albany, Sept. 12 AP)—The Roosevelt campaign train is not going to travel unknown in the black hours of the night.

A large illuminated sign bearing the words "Roosevelt Special" was hung on the handrail of the Democratic presidential nominee's car today, ready for use when the Governor rolls out of Albany on his western tour tonight.

ROOSEVELT OFF TO WIN WEST

Albany, Sept. 12 (INS)—Gov. Roosevelt sets out today "to win the West." Another Roosevelt—it was "T. R."—once wrote several volumes entitled "Winning the West."

Before he returns to Albany, three weeks hence, he will have visited 20-odd states, whose 200 electoral votes will have a powerful voice in determining the next President of the United States.

His first speech, in Topeka, Kan., Wednesday, is regarded as one of the most important he will make.

CURLEY ON AIR IN SEATTLE

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 12—Mayor Curley of Boston was guest at a dinner tendered by a group of 500 men, members of the Elks and Moose, when he arrived in Seattle. He spoke, his address being broadcast.

He was greeted on his arrival at Seattle by a committee headed by Mayor Dore, a former Charlestown resident.

Later the mayor spoke again over a hookup of the stations of Seattle and Tacoma, which covered the entire state.

Mr. Curley said Franklin D. Roosevelt's election "means the revival of industry, the restoration of prosperity and the repeal of the most vicious law ever placed on the statute books, the 18th Amendment.

In the evening a dinner was tendered the mayor by the Democratic Club of Seattle.

Mayor Dore, who is a Republican, in introducing Mayor Curley, announced that he would follow the leadership of his friend Mayor Curley and would support Roosevelt.

One of the committee who greeted the mayor was Dr. Joseph Siegal, formerly of Boston. He was graduated from Boston English High School in 1911.

INFLUENCE OF READING ON COOLIDGE IS HARD TO DETERMINE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

PROF. ROGERS

MR. CALVIN COOLIDGE in his reticent and decorous way is still allowing us to be privy to the secrets of his youth. Compared with the kind of information the younger fry are perfectly willing, nay eager, to give about themselves, Mr. Coolidge's reminiscences are pretty tame, not to say formal. But any information about the springs and sources of true greatness is always valuable, particularly since nowadays the skilled Freudian can read into the most harmless statement undreamed of revelations of one kind and another.

I'd like to turn a skilled Freudian loose on Mr. Coolidge's Autobiography and the supplementary chapters which appear from time to time. I'd be willing to bet whatever is legal tender in betting nowdays that the book would leave him - to use a fine old melodramatic word - baffled. Yes sir, baffled, gnawing his nails, flipping his cigarette ashes and cursing softly into his top hat. Mr. Coolidge is no Rousseau, no Casanova. His information is useful but not revealing. He doesn't give much away.

* * *

Farm Life Restricted Reading

The October issue of the Cosmopolitan Magazine contains an article about the books in the Coolidge home. It is important because it links up with what Mr. Coolidge had to say in his autobiography about his educational influences. Those were, in the main, classical, of the old school. He mentions in this article, by the way, that after Cicero most other political orations seemed to sound flat. He knew his Cicero and his Demosthenes and his Plutarch, as well as his ancient history.

If in manner and speech Mr. Coolidge has always seemed to exude a certain solemn simplicity, it must be because he modelled himself upon those earlier American statesman who, in turn, had modelled themselves on the same figures of classic history and oratory. There may be a few politicians left in the South with that background, but there are precious few in the North. Mr. Coolidge stands alone as the kind of American statesman the Adams family would have approved. Come to think of it, the man who seems most to resemble him today is the Secretary of the Navy.

He was brought up then, on classic history and old American history. There is a Bible history, though his prose style shows little influence from the King James. There is a book about Lincoln and one about Garfield, the latter probably a campaign document. "From Log Cabin to White House," "From Tow-path to Convention" or something of the sort. A book of contemporary biography, one about Livingstone and Stanley, and a couple of boy's books about the Revolution, for which Mr. Coolidge seems to have had considerable affection. One thing is clear: Mr. Coolidge's historical and political education was strictly in terms of the revolutionary and post-revolutionary period. I suspect him of being a John Marshall Federalist or a Daniel Webster Whig and of never having been brought down to date.

The selection of books that Mr. Coolidge names is probably typical for a well-to-do farm-house in the more austere parts of New England. In a family that had enough money for an academy schooling and a college education one might have expected more books. But Mr. Coolidge points out with perfect simplicity and naturalness that on a Vermont farm life was real and life was earnest and that playing hookey to go fishing was more excusable than sitting about with a book. The Maine farmer and fisherman who judged that "books rots the mind" was speaking for the yeoman class always and everywhere. Compare for example the frail and spectacled Master Theodore Roosevelt devouring books. But he was brought up in the more liberal and effete civilization of New York City.

Novels Absent From List

The most interesting book on the list is "Hilliard's Sixth Reader." The book is not so famous, perhaps, as the sixth reader of another series, McGuffey's, but it was doubtless the same sort of thing. That is, it was infinitely better than the general run of literature the boys and girls of today have to read in school, consisting as it did of great selections from the greatest literature in the English language. Mark Sullivan in one of the volumes of his contemporary history "Our Times" goes into considerable detail as to the influence of McGuffey and similar school books on the culture of their day. They at least laid a solid foundation for later good reading.

You will note there are no novels in the list. The boy's books were probably looked upon as chiefly history, and so young Calvin took them. His heroes were heroes of history, not of fiction. Curiously enough, his favorite was the peppery and impetuous Ethan Allen, whose remarks at Ticonderoga were so unprintable that they had to be turned into pious rhetoric. Novels may have been considered too sinful, though I doubt whether that reason would weigh much with the pragmatic Coolidges. But what was worse, they were not useful. They were a waste of time. I should be very much surprised to learn that Mr. Coolidge has ever read more than a handful of novels.

The period in which young Calvin grew up was producing some important American literature. There was Walt Whitman, for instance, though I am sure that Walt was rigidly excluded from the volume "Choice Poems and Lyrics" which was one of the boy's books. And the Whitman conception of democracy was certainly not that of the good Republicans of Vermont. A very great story teller was taking the country by storm, one Mark Twain, author of "Innocents Abroad" and "Roughing It." By the time the boy Calvin was in his teens Mark Twain was producing his finest work, especially the masterpiece "Huckleberry Finn." But then and for many years later Huck Finn was being barred from public libraries for offering bad examples to good boys. Anyway, Mark Twain represented an America and a view of America which meant nothing to Vermont in the 80s.

Pretty Thin as Literature

They were few books, according to our modern notions. Not so few as those young Abraham Lincoln pored over by the fire, but few enough in all conscience. And, somehow, meager. The word is hard to find. Meager, thin, not very full of the milk and wine of literature. As a matter of fact, with almost nothing of the milk and wine of literature. Rather elementary books, written probably by rather elementary minds, simple in substance and pedestrian in style. Not a volume of genuine literature in the lot, save for the Bible.

A ribald person once said Mr. Coolidge looked as if he had been weaned on a pickle. That is blasphemy, of course, but it is not blasphemous to say that all his writings and utterances show that he was weaned on pretty thin and perfunctory literary fare. Always excepting his classics, and those came later. But he read them assiduously. He knew them by heart. He remembers them fondly. They helped largely to make him the kind of man he became. Of how much of our current truck of daily newspapers, weekly and monthly magazines, books of the months and all that, that we are encumbered with and glance at and forget, may that be said? The little book-shelf in Mr. Coolidge's new home has real meaning.

SOCIETY LIQUOR RUNNING YACHTS HUNTED

GIRL CHARGES POLICEMAN STRUCK HER

"Knocked Me Down and Beat Me Terribly," Says Louise Barry of a Brookline Officer

Patrolman John O'Brien of Brookline struck her and then gave her his gun and asked her to shoot him, according to Miss Louise Barry, 33, of 404 Boylston st., Brookline, upon whose charges O'Brien has been suspended from the department.

Miss Barry told the Boston Evening American her story today shortly before O'Brien was scheduled to go before a trial board of Brookline selectmen and police and while her charges involving another policeman were still under investigation.

HER OWN STORY

"I am determined to push this matter to the very end and I will attend the hearing with an attorney today," she said.

"I will prove beyond any doubt that one of those officers (not O'Brien) took me to his home," she said.

"This officer picked me up almost in my doorstep a week ago Saturday night and drove me to his house and he gave me a drink. I fell asleep on a couch and when I came to there were two other officers there. One was O'Brien.

"CARRIED TO FIELD"

"We went from there to a police box at Warren st. The other officers left me with O'Brien. We walked down to Hedge st. and he struck me on the nose and mouth with his fist. He gave me a terrible beating. I fell down.

"He carried me to a field and took out his gun and told me he had been waiting three years for the opportunity.

"I screamed and he suddenly said, 'You've brought me to my senses. Here's the gun. Shoot me.' I took the gun but gave it back to him. Then I went to a garage and told them what happened and the police arrived."

ACCUSER OF BROOKLINE POLICEMAN

Miss Louise Barry, upon whose charges that he gave her a "terrible beating," Patrolman John O'Brien faced a trial board of selectmen and police in Brookline today. Miss Barry's charges involving a second Brookline policeman in the alleged attack are under investigation. The young woman told her own story of the episode to the Boston Evening American today.

PALATIAL BOAT, $150,000 CARGO SEIZED HERE

More Craft Believed Operating Disguised as the Floating Palaces of Millionaires

Belief that the $250,000 "floating palace" yacht Prudence, seized in Dorchester Bay with a $150,000 liquor cargo aboard, may be only one of such craft operating in a new and more fashionable phase of rum-running was expressed today by federal officials.

Eight men, taken on the yacht of which even a multi-millionaire would be proud, will be arraigned in federal court, but the investigators as yet have not learned the identity of the real owner.

They believe however that the yacht is operated by a New England-New York-New Jersey rum smuggling ring, which probably has other expensive and innocent appearing craft also carrying liquor for the society trade.

SECRET DOOR FOUND

The Prudence, a vessel of shiny mahogany and polished brass, with a secret door and a secret between decks compartment filled with choice liquors, is the most elaborate craft ever seized for rum smuggling in American waters since prohibition's inception, according to customs officials.

In its dozen staterooms are the coolest suites, the best of Irish linens, the most expensive drapes and elaborate vanity appurtenances for women.

Apparent recent occupancy of at least one of the staterooms by a woman was discovered when hair pins were found on the costly rug.

According to Customs officials the yacht is registered to Masson Dillaway, of East 42d st, New York City. Inquiry there revealed it was the Tudor City Hotel and that Dillaway had checked out of the place four months ago.

EIGHT FACE COURT

In the 1931 Registry of Merchant Vessels the ship is listed as being owned by William M. Greve of Madison ave., New York City. Greve, a millionaire, could not be located last night in New York.

The arrested men, who will be arraigned before the U. S. Commissioner today, are Charles J. Kelley, 38, investment broker of West 73d st., New York; Norman McWilliams, 32, captain, of Woodstock, ave., Allston; John J. Mulcahy, 33, mate, of Walcott ter., Malden; Charles J. Jackson, 42, engineer, of Commonwealth ave., Brighton; William F. Hake seaman, of Sawyer ave., Dorchester; Henry A. White, 48, seaman, Chestnut st., Gloucester; Reuel Nickerson, 28, seaman, of Humphrey st., Dorchester; and Benjamin S. Knudson, 37, cook of Norfolk ave., Swampscott.

Investigation in New York, according to customs officials, revealed there was no Kelley a tenant in the 73d st. apartment house and had not been since 1925. Officials believe he is the "big shot" in the directing of the boat, although he denies all knowledge of the liquor aboard.

FIND AN ACCIDENT

Although various rumors were current regarding the capture customs officials declared their "find" was purely accidental and the illicit cargo had been uncovered while they were making a routine inspection of the craft after it had been boarded for a minor infraction of navigation rules.

Deputy Surveyor Thomas F. Finnegan, Customs Supt. Owen McKenna and a crew of customs agents boarded the Prudence as she rods at anchor in Dorchester Bay Saturday night. As they looked over the craft liquor of a fine grade was found in the crew's quarters. This led officials to make a further search.

After some time searchers located wires hidden behind a light socket which opened a wall panel leading to a hold in which 1500 cases of choicest whiskey were stored. In addition two huge tanks were found to contain fine rye.

Office Is Looted for 5th Time

After his place of business had been entered last night for the fifth time within a year, and office equipment and material stolen, John Pearce, proprietor of the John Pearce Inc upholstery manufacturer, of Worcester st., South End, today made a personal complaint to Police Commissioner Hultman.

Pearce told the commissioner police have come to his place after each break, made copious notes, but that nothing has come of their investigations. He said he felt police should be able at least to trace stolen material.

Last night, an adding machine, a typewriter and a quantity of material were taken. On the last trip, the robbers took two typewriters and much material.

Pearce believes the thieves who broke in last night are the same who entered it last time. Boards erected after the last break were removed and entrance made through the skylight.

NEGRO HELD AS HIT-RUN DRIVER

A plea for his Negro chauffeur, under arrest as a drunken, hit-and-run driver, was made in municipal court today by Duval Dunne of Bay State rd., Back Bay, Boston clothier, but the chauffeur was held in $1000 for a hearing September 19.

The chauffeur, Alvester Debnam 34 of Coventry st., Roxbury, was arrested last night after his car is alleged to have injured Miss Ruth Reynolds, 27, of Marion st., Somerville, and Carl Sherman, 32, of Woolston st., Mattapan, at Washington and Northampton sts.

Continuing, according to the charge, Debnam then crashed into the car of Gerard Reitham, 26, of Hatch st., South Boston. Debnam is alleged again to have driven away but he was captured after a chase by Charles T. LeBlanc a taxi driver.

GIRL DYING IN CRASH, 3 HELD

While Dorothy Stowe of Allston was fighting for her life in City Hospital, drunkenness warrants against her chum and two men were issued in municipal court today as an aftermath of an accident in Atlantic ave., Saturday night.

Named in the warrants are Miss Lilian D. Sprouls, daughter of Dr. Joseph Sprouls of Summit ave., Brookline; Samuel A. Mason, 2d, of Memorial drive, Cambridge and Austin Brockenbrough of Sunnyside ave., Winthrop.

Police told the court they were injured with Miss Stowe when Mason's automobile crashed into a standing freight car and slid 41 feet before coming to a halt.

The three were slightly injured, but Miss Stowe's condition necessitated a blood transfusion that was given by her father, Arthur Stowe, [illegible]

Arraignment of Miss Sprouls and Mason in the municipal court was postponed pending a change in the condition of Miss Stowe.

Campbell Fights Auto Rates; Sees Revenues Increase

Despite general decrea[illegible] in auto [illegible] rates, insurance companies will receive a greater income this year, it was predicted today at the State House.

Chester J. Campbell, [illegible] for the Massachusetts Automobile Club, made the prediction at the public hearing on 1933 r[illegible]

"I believe in the principle of compulsory automobile insurance, but the present act does not benefit the public," Campbell said.

"While some rates were reduced, there were increases in other sections, and the total income of insurance companies will be greater than last year."

He added there should be a state-wide rate throughout the State instead of the zoning system.

John Dailey, Boston attorney, blamed "a few hooting lawyers, who have violated a decent code of ethics," for many of the troubles under compulsory insurance.

Atty. Herman Isenberg appeared for an organization of taxicab owners in protest of the [illegible] $360 a year for cabs.

"No, she can't. We are getting welfare aid. That is, I'm getting welfare aid."

In Middlesex superior court where he was fined recently in a criminal investigation of Medford Trust Co. affairs, Frank W. Lovering was excused from jury duty today at his own request.

Lovering pleaded he was defending the civil suit brought by Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy against himself and other directors of the bank in Suffolk court.

Four others were excused for [illegible] reasons.

2 ESCAPE JAIL BY CURIOSITY

A curious mother saved her son and his companion from being jailed on a charge of carrying revolvers, but the pair must now face a charge of breaking and entering.

Mrs. Esther Martin, of Leverett st., West End, testified that Saturday night she heard a clicking in her son's bedroom and found her son, Joseph, 20, and Abraham Gross, 19, of Chambers st., examining revolvers they said they had found.

She called Gross' father, who took the guns and threw them into the Charles. Sunday morning the pair were found by Detective Dennis McCarthy in an auto containing cigars and cigarettes stolen from a Cambridge store.

In Municipal court, Judge Cohen found the boys guilty on the charge of carrying revolvers, but since the weapons had been thrown away, the case was filed, and the pair turned over to Cambridge authorities.

Three other youths are also held.

HULTMAN DOLE FRAUD REPORT READY THIS WEEK

Girl About Town

By ALYCE SIEMENS

The "Old-Fool" Man:

They secretly make fun of him
And drain his wallet dry,
Then call him "One good fellow,"
While drinking all his rye.

They fill him full of flattery,
Laugh loud at his own joke,
Then tell each new acquaintance
About their "poor old soak."

But don't be foolish, never try
To treat him fair and square;
It's just a waste of precious time
On one too dumb to care!

Lookin' Thru the Mail:

There's the lengthy interesting letter from Medford's Virginia Armstrong, in which she checks us up a bit about that story on the German band we said was in 'Sweet Adeline' sometime back . . . Virginia was a member of the original 'Sweet Adeline" company and the road company, and knows that it was Arthur Hammerstein who produced that show, instead of the late beloved Ziegfeld, as we printed . . . Virginia tells us that when the show played here, in the fall of 1930, there was no German band in it . . . at some show girls and chorines dressed up as dummy musicians with instruments in their hands, trying to look intelligent and as if they were playing (A tough job we'd say!) And all they could play was the radio . . . Virginia remembers playing Boston because she fainted twice in one day, during Helen Morgan's big number . . . But Helen exercised no wrath . . . Just hustled to Virginia's side, as soon as she exited, to see how she was doing . . . Miss Armstrong writes on, 'I want every dramatic editor and critic to take notice that Jimmy Dunn, now of movie fame, managed very successfully not to get noticed or mentioned in the Boston papers when he played opposite Miss Morgan. I have all the clippings. Just one mentioned him but gave him the wrong name. No one seemed to realize at that time and, least of all, Jimmy himself, that in less than a year "Bad Girl would have made him a star. When the show's notice of closing went up, every chorine rushed to the stars for photos. But none to Jimmy Dunn, excepting two. He's swell and regular" . . . So, we're sorry we said that the German band was in "Sweet Adeline," but we're glad Virginia penned her letter.

Lucky Becky!

When the Professional Players gave their opening performance in Boston in 1930, Mrs. Fitzwilliam Sargent of Philadelphia, the organizer of the Players there, presented Rebekah Hobbs with an exquisite cornelian dangling bracelet of elephants—knowing right well Rebekah's yen for them . . . The next season she lugged a huge silver office-gadget elephant over from Philadelphia . . . And this year it'll be something elephanty you can bet . . . But not a white elephant . . . Not with "Reunion In Vienna" the first shot out of the American Theater Society's gun this year on Sept. 19.

Dr. Bernard Benjamin's hobby is getting his hands on ailing musicians who've had no relief elsewhere and believe us it's one time when the bass-and-c-ef boys have to take it' . . . That was a [illegible] working rabbi who made that recent prominent wedding party wait until an hour later—[illegible] saving time etc. . . . POLICE 'PAINT A PICTURE' FOR THE MAYOR'

Aid for 400 Is Stopped; Fewer Seek Funds Than Before Inquiry Was Started

Police Commissioner Hultman said today he expects to have his report on 206 "possibly unworthy" welfare cases ready for the mayor by the middle of the week.

"It is my intention to give the mayor a fair picture of what it is all about and that's all," he said. "The report will be a summary and investigation of each of 206 cases described as possibly unworthy."

He said the reason for delay was the decision to make a thorough [illegible] of [illegible] 500 cases [illegible] submitted as the first for investigation.

FEWER SEEK AID.

"I don't know if it will be necessary to make this kind of a check on the entire 500 cases but if so it will cause considerable delay," he said.

He said he had received from the welfare department a list of 400 names of persons whose aid has been stopped. If any of these are among the 206, their cases will not be removed from the report, he added.

The limelight of publicity in connection with the police investigation has already had the effect of reducing the number of persons seeking assistance, according to figures given out by the city welfare board.

As a result, the welfare overseers believe the amount of money that will have been paid out for aid during the month of September will fall well below the $1,000,000 average of the last several months.

FIRST DROP IN LIST

In August the number of persons applying for assistance from the welfare board totaled 2401. This showed the marked effect of the police investigation as 3113 applied for aid in July, 3926 in June, 3575 in May, 3026 in April, 3540 in March and 4480 in February. During the first three days of September only 169 persons asked for assistance.

During the week ending September 3 the number of unemployed men reporting for work for aid rendered their families fell off to 11,933, as against 12,442 for the first week in August, 12,364 the second week, 12,242 the third week and 12,017 the fourth week. The sum paid to the families of the men reporting for work in the week ending September 3 was $107,461, as against amounts as high as $112,208 earlier in the previous month.

AD MEN TO HEAR CARL DENNETT

Members of the Boston Advertising Club will hear a direct message to all New England tomorrow noon in Hotel Statler when Carl P. Dennett, vice-president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, will speak on "How Governmental Agencies Are Aiding in the Recovery."

Mr. Dennett's message will bring to New England advertising executives a message of faith in American principles and ideals of government, of hope based on America's steady march of progress in spite of wars, panics, depression and social unrest, and of confidence as a result of aggressive and progressive action of such agencies as the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Federal Reserve System.

Mr. Dennett is active in helping mold the co-operative efforts of government agencies and American business for a strong business recovery. As chairman of the banking and industrial committee of the First Federal Reserve District and as chairman of the National Economy League he is in a good position to feel the business pulse.

The address will be broadcast over WBZ and WBZA from 1.30 to 2 o'clock.

State Acts to Stop Barring Veterans on Road Jobs

The Boston Evening American today makes more disclosures regarding brazen law defiance by certain highway contractors who are reaping the benefits of $20,000,000 relief expenditures while barring veterans, citizen labor and local unemployed.

Court action was taken today by the State Department of Labor and Industries against three contractors in the drive to prevent discrimination against veterans and citizens and kindred violations of the preference law on highway construction and other state projects.

A [illegible] Wareham [illegible] the Eastern [illegible] preference [illegible] World War [illegible] [illegible] Henry Pompeo of Quincy, president and Alexander Pompeo, treasurer. Atty. Joseph Morette [illegible] for the Department of Labor and Industries, called the case to the attention of the court.

TWO OTHERS IN COURT

James T. Kerr, contractor, with an office at 1 State st., Boston, was charged in Taunton court with working employes on the Taunton highway more than 48 hours a week.

John Miller, Malden contractor, was charged in Cambridge district court with failing to pay mechanics the wage scale fixed by law in handling a sub-contract on the Rindge Technical Training School in Cambridge.

"Buck-passing" seems to be as important an item of equipment as pickaxes and steam shovels in emergency relief road-building jobs in Massachusetts, according to complaints reaching the Department of Labor and Industries and the State employment bureau.

OFFICIALS HINDERED

Even State investigators are tossed around" in their efforts to get facts for official reports as to the personnel employed, whether aliens or citizens, the scale of wages and hours, etc.

'That's not my worry. See the foreman," and similar evasions are given State agents authorized to gather such information, thus handicapping them in their work. Contractors who have promised to employ men recommended under the preference act are charged with stubbornly having refused to live up to their agreement in the face of repeated demands.

Adolph Urban, 138 Clark st., Framingham, a World War veteran with a family, is one of scores of ex-servicemen who were turned down on a road-building berth. He wrote as follows to Walter H. Neaves, director of the State employment department:

"I have been out of work for over a month, having been formerly employed by the state highway department. I am a World War veteran with a wife and four children and need work badly. Isn't there something you can do for me? I see there is a job coming up in Wellesley soon and wish you could get me on this. May I hear from you at your earliest convenience?"

Another instalment will be published in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.

200,000 PUPILS RETURN AS CITY SCHOOLS OPEN

Facilities Taxed by a Record Number of Entrants, but None Is Turned Away

They are part of the great army of 200,000 pupils who returned to school in Greater Boston today.

From the squalling and screaming youngsters who are leaving their mothers' apron strings for the first time, to serious and sedate high school seniors who begin their last term, this vast army of youth moved in broken, happy ranks to take up their winter quarters.

140,000 IN BOSTON

In Boston alone preparations had been completed to register 140,000 pupils. Cambridge, Waltham, Brookline, Newton, Revere and Reading were ready to greet 60,000 more.

Boston faced the problem of accommodations. Facilities are taxed to the utmost. Seven new buildings, six elementary and one junior high school opened and in spite of the record number of pupils, Superintendent Patrick Campbell announced that none would be turned away.

He announced an investigation requested by him and approved by the committee would be started to determine the value of industrial and shopwork courses.

TO REPORT ON COURSES

A committee consisting of a Tech professor, a professor in the Harvard School of Education, a member of the State board of education an official of the Boston school system, an official of the Boston Central Labor Union and a representative of the employers' association will begin a three-month survey, and on their report will depend the future of industrial and shopwork courses.

The number of entrants to Boston Latin indicates there is no depression in the quest for a classical education.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

Certain streets in New York change rapidly, lose their character, or take on an entirely different . . . in a few year.

Old Dewey Theater

Pastor's was part of the Tammany Hall building, which we knew simply as . . . of Democratic politicians, something powerful and important, with plump aldermen forever smoking long black . . . [illegible] . . . lower East Side . . . And opposite it was . . . Theater, considered . . . extremely naughty.

Here rather rough sailors flocked and only a few women were to be seen scattered through the . . . smoke, for the jokes were hardly that came bouncing over the footlights; and they always put on what was called a "leg show" in such a place.

There would be court proceedings but somehow the show always went on again, expurgated for a few performances, then drifting back gradually to its old salaciousness.

"Old Homestead"

At the corner of Irving pl. and 14th st. there stood, until a few years ago, the Academy of Music. In the 70's—the period of which Edith Wharton wrote in "The Age of Innocence"—grand opera was given there; and when I was a lad in the early 90's I saw Denman Thompson in "The Old Homestead," and was overwhelmed by the vastness of the place, thrilled as I have seldom been since with the comedy and pathos of the play. "Way Down East" played an interminable engagement there later, and Mrs. Fiske gave "Becky Sharpe" there for a run.

Gallery Seats

If, on a . . . funds enough, I would loaf . . . the gallery of a theater where the seats cost only fifty cents. I came to know every . . . glittering lane which is Broadway; that Broadway which was then infested with the sad daughters of joy who plied their uncertain trade from one end of . . .

I knew . . . old Garrick Theater, down which one might plunge unless one exerted care. And I knew those which were commodious like the . . . we . . . first row, we were deliriously happy.

Missed Big Scene

I remember going to see "The Great Ruby" at Daly's in which the wonderful Ada Rehan appeared. Our seats were in the gallery far on the side, and in the balloon scene, I never saw the balloon at all; only the dangling legs of the man who was supposed to fall from it. Why didn't they lift that proscenium curtain a little more, so that we gallery gods could see it all? It seemed cruel to me then; it seems cruel to me now.

Afterward, we would have a simple soda down at Hudnut's—ten cents then, filled with ice cream, too, and mighty fine. Now . . . at any of the Fifth ave. shops and the price has climbed to forty cents.

It was awful to be so poor, yet how divinely happy we were! Home by cable or trolley, or, more often, walking in the slush and rain.

The signs winked and blinked at us—not so many as there are today; yet they thrilled us and gave us a wild enthusiasm for life in this Gargantuan town.

Latest Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

THERE ARE CERTAIN MOMENTS IN MILADY'S LIFE when a dozen college certificates are not worth as much as one really good hat on the head! This may be true whether she is a business woman in search of a position or a woman of leisure in search of popularity or a husband. No one will deny it. It is merely mentioned as a point to prove the real value and the actual economy of good taste.

MRS. RANDOLPH C. GREW

Of course today, under the grey but shall we be optimistic and say lifting clouds of the depression, Milady will claim that good hats cost a frightful amount, far more than the natty little inexpensive ones.

That may be so but if she will just study a bit the line and contour of her own charming features and suit them to a hat, not cheap but depression-possible, she will have a hat that is in good taste even were there more smart and catchy little models to choose from than this autumn, but they all need to be studied until Milady discovers the one that gives a good effect, that is smart as to line and suitable as to type, then she may sally forth with all the assurance in the world and be ready for the day's adventure, knowing that her pretty face is becomingly set off in a tasteful "chapeau." It is such a joy to feel one's hat is really "au fait."

Modish Wine Shade Becoming to Brunettes

FOR INSTANCE, THERE IS THE DARK HAIRED VERY beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Grew, Miss Eugenie Grew of Boston and Manchester. Have you noticed how trig and attractive the little lady looks in her claret toned felt model. The modish wine shade is so becoming to brunettes, and Miss Grew is especially charming in that shade. Her dark hair shows beneath her little hat and her aquiline features are set off by the modish little model.

Red and White

AND THEN THERE IS sunny-faced Miss Priscilla Watson. She looks especially attractive in her cutwork frock of red and white; it has a becoming little V neck and those modish little short sleeves with fluted edges. She wears a natural straw, picture hat, and that lovely smile of hers peeps out from under the wide brim like a ray of sunshine we lately saw glancing in colorful glory from out the edge of the eclipse. It's lovely to have a nice smile like Miss Watson's, there is nothing more charming or attractive, especially when one has lovely teeth like hers.

MISS WATSON IS THE daughter of Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus S. Watson of Washington and Boston. She is one of this season's debutantes and with all her charms we predict that this fair young lady will have a beautiful time. It's just a way lovely girls have, they just can't help having happy times.

THEN THERE IS MISS MILDA ALLEN, of Brookline who has such good taste in her choice of clothes and such a natty way of wearing them. Miss Allen is a very attractive little piece with dark hair, that she wears smoothly brushed back from her face and wound in a simple and becoming knot at the back of her neck. She has a very winsome mouth, a beautifully modeled nose and dark brown rather wistful eyes.

SHE IS ONE OF THIS SEASON'S debutantes and her parents Mr. and Mrs. Paul Allen of Brookline, are to give a sumptuous tea on Dec. 2 at the Algonquin Club, Boston. Miss Allen is another "deb" that will have a joyous season.

Bern Tragedy's Answer in Melancholia

ONE SOMBRE, sinister word—MELANCHOLIA—seems to be the answer to the problem of the summer's most spectacular [illegible] death of his own hand of Paul Bern, brilliant [illegible] executive and husband of the platinum blonde star Jean Harlow.

And, out of the [illegible] statements of those who knew him best—his doctor and his closest friend—emerges [illegible] son of that death. It is the revelation that the gentlest and most generous personality can be poisoned fatally by morbid, brooding over sensitiveness.

Paul Bern appears to have been the victim of what may be called mental hemophilia. You remember the dreadful disease from which that dead boy who might have become the Czar of all the Russians suffered—the incurable tendency to bleed [illegible] a scratch, a [illegible] comparatively [illegible] weakness. But the [illegible] of mental bleeding [illegible] poor Paul Bern [illegible] skinned souls [illegible] the quick by each [illegible] suspicion.

UNNECESSARY TRAGEDY

If you are such a sensitive plant—if you have the tendency to brood and agonize over every grievance, [illegible] that goes wrong [illegible] of Paul Bern's [illegible] and the suffering [illegible] thing and remember [illegible] madness [illegible].

Here's what his personal physician, Dr. E. P. [illegible] of the self-shooting:

"Acute melancholia caused the suicide of Paul Bern. Bern suffered from trivial things which became exaggerated in his mind and resulted in acute melancholia."

John Gilbert, the actor who claims Paul as his best friend, admits that he made at least one previous attempt at self-destruction and explains:

"It was at a time when Bern was deeply hurt. He was extremely sensitive and so constituted that little things hurt him greatly. He would brood for days over some imagined slight."

Yet life gave much to Paul Bern and, by all accounts, he gave much to life. He was the little friend of all the Hollywood world, with heart and pocketbook always ready to help. He apparently [illegible] what he preached, in [illegible] phrase from his lips quoted by John Gilbert: "My only reason for living is the opportunity to give others happiness."

HIS WAS A FULL LIFE

What Shakespeare calls "suspicion, like a worm i' the bud, preyed on Paul Bern—suspicion of life's essential [illegible]. He yielded for years to the temptation, which so many of the rest of us do not resist—the temptation to be hurt by [illegible] to exaggerate molehills of irritation into mountains of grievance, to feel that nobody loves us and we're going out in the garden and eat worms.

Don't we know all about it? We are naturally that sort of idiot ourself. We can steep our own soul in the grandest of glooms, starting from a pinprick of discouragement or irritation or unkindness. Our only plea in extenuation is that we used to be a [illegible]

[illegible]

It [illegible] so [illegible] the curse of [illegible] not only [illegible] for [illegible] trolled, [illegible] preferable, as apparently happened to Paul [illegible] highly imperfect [illegible] things forever [illegible] each of us has [illegible] it"—the sooner [illegible]

Daily True Story
Press-Agent Star-Dust

The publicity representative of the Paragon Film Company was sitting in the president's office and smoking a company cigar. John Gaynor knew how to make himself at ease in any situation.

"I've got just the girl for you," declared Gaynor, "ravishing, exotic, temperamental, full of nerve—I mean, verve. She would play the beautiful girl spy to perfection."

"What's her name?" asked the president.

"Nadya Borosiowa."

For a moment the president's face expressed a perfect vacuum. But he was not to be humbled by the superior knowledge of his press agent.

"Oh, yes, the Russian dancer. I remember her," he lied, "but what will she want?"

"Her Paris contract is expiring and one of my friends has written me she's dying to go to Hollywood. I think we can get her over here with a lot of promises," replied Gaynor.

TOO YOUNG FOR WAR SPY

"Well, let's tie her up for this one picture and a contingency clause for the future. Start some publicity on her. Perhaps we can say she was a spy in the World War."

Gaynor departed, but instead of going back to his office, went straight out of the building. He took a street car and stepped off near a telegraph office, far from the Paragon Film Company. Then he wired New York:

"Dear Grace: Depart at once and come back on biggest liner. Dye your hair black. Love."

• • •

Finally, he came to the president with a specific reply from the girl. She had agreed to come at astonishingly low terms. The president chuckled happily.

"The Russians are impractical," he remarked. "I was a bit doubtful at first. But for such a low sum it's worth taking a gamble. Perhaps, she'll prove the new star everyone has been looking for."

Then the ballyhoo started on a big scale—the "build-up," as it is known among press agents.

At length Gaynor packed his grip for New York. So did the president and a few other officials. Nadya was arriving in state like a queen.

Nadya faced the press with an amazed expression on her face. She posed all they wanted. But as to talk—Gaynor did the talking. He explained that she knew no English, that the trip had wearied her and begged them off successfully.

Then she was secreted to an exclusive hotel and locked in her suite.

• • •

In their local New York offices, the president, a few other executives and Gaynor were sitting and discussing the event, gloating over the publicity their new star had received.

"You know," remarked the president, "I recognized her at once. That's why it pays to be highbrow and visit those artistic dances and so forth. You can find a lot of material among them."

Gaynor smiled and continued to puff on his cigar.

"The face looks familiar to me, too," remarked one of the vice-presidents. "Maybe I once saw her in one of those French films that we so often turn down."

"I smell a rat," interrupted the executive. "I didn't have a long enough look at her. But she didn't seem to walk like a foreigner."

TOO LATE TO TURN BACK

Gaynor smiled. "Well, since you boys seem to be suspicious I might as well come out with it. All of you have seen her—and in Hollywood. She used to be my secretary, and now she's my wife. But she'll make a good movie star just the same."

For a moment the trio remained stunned. A variety of grimaces passed over their faces. Finally the president spoke.

"Well, I guess it's too late. We'll have to go through with it and give her the chance. After all she does look kind of exotic—and it's funny we never noticed her possibilities."

Gaynor nodded, as they all arose. Then he called up the hotel of Grace Allen and informed her he was coming right up.

No Danger in Low Blood Pressure

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

FROM TIME TO TIME I have outlined for you the many causes of high blood pressure. Today I want to tell you something about "hypotension," or low blood pressure. Perhaps too little attention has been given to this subject and possibly too much emphasis has been placed upon high blood pressure.

Dr. Copeland

Low blood pressure is more prevalent than is commonly believed. Since it has no immediate ill effects it is often overlooked.

The blood pressure varies in different individuals, depending upon age, sex and environment. The approximate pressure can be determined by adding a hundred to your age. A blood pressure of one hundred or less is considered low.

Low blood pressure is not a disease. It is regarded as a sign of some physical disorder and careful investigation should be made to find what it really is. Insurance companies do not reject applicants with low blood pressure, as they do if it is too high. Persons with low pressure are accepted if there is no damage to the heart, blood vessels, liver, kidneys or the general circulation.

Low pressure may be temporary or permanent. It is frequently seen in the temporary form after severe shock, operation, accident or hemorrhage. Low pressure may be found in certain acute diseases, especially typhoid fever. It is also met as a temporary condition in pneumonia, influenza, diphtheria and typhus fever.

Low blood pressure may be caused by chronic inflammation of the tonsils, defects of the teeth, nasal sinus or gall bladder disease.

How One Man Lost 22 Pounds

Mr. Herman Runkis of Detroit writes: "A few lines of thanks from a rheumatism sufferer — my first bottle of Kruschen Salts took all the aches and swellings out of my joints—with my first bottle I went on a diet and lost 22 pounds and now I feel like a new man."

To lose fat SAFELY and quickly take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast. Cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

Etiquette for Condolences

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We received word that my husband's brother-in-law had passed away. They live in a distant city. I've never written to my husband's sister, and I am at a loss to know how to extend our sympathy in a most tender manner.

R.

For the letter of condolence I suggest that you write perhaps something of this nature:

Dear Dorothy:

You have been in our thoughts constantly since we had the sad news that your dear Ted had passed away, and we do so want to tell you of our deep and tender sympathy. We realize so much how sorrowful and difficult these days must be for you, and I wish that we lived nearer to you so that we might have the great privilege of comforting you and of being of help to you, if that were possible.

Ted's firm character has always been a great inspiration in our household, and the memory of him is very precious to us. Such a splendid glowing thing he made of his life . . . you must be very proud of that, but I know, too, that having this splendor taken away, and so suddenly, is terrifically hard to bear. But all our prayers and all our love and devotion are with you, Dorothy dear, in these days and always.

Do write us when you can and tell us of yourself. We want so much to have some word from you.

Affectionately,

Marge.

Planning a Wardrobe

is always an exciting business—and this Fall it promises to be even more exciting than ever. Here are some Fashion hints to remember. Fabrics are rough and nobby—woolens look like silks and silks like woolens, but fabric is more important than it has been for several seasons. Rough crinkly crepes are immensely popular—for all types of dresses. If you want to practice the best economy in the world, buy simple things, in colorings you won't tire of, and in the very best qualities you can possibly afford. Necklines are inclined to be high. Shoulders are broadened and emphasized by the cut of the sleeve. Skirts are only slightly flared, and they should reach approximately to the lower part of the calf for daytime. Sport skirts are a little shorter and afternoon dresses a little longer. The waistline is slimly fitted above and below down well over the hips. Watch for more Fashion news next Monday.

Devotedly,

Priscilla.

A Novel of Love's Disillusion

—By Hazel Livingston—

"GOING OUT?" Aunt Julia put the question, since they didn't seem to want to be sociable and talk.

"Not at all," Val said politely.

Well, if they weren't going to talk . . . Aunt Julia inquired after Joe's uncle in Minneapolis, the health of the two youngest Carey's, explained her theory about bringing up little girls.

"And above all I wouldn't show any favoritism. I told your mother right to her face, Joe, that the way she favored Vivian wasn't right. I told her—"

Joe waited politely for Aunt Julia to finish. Val said, "I beg your pardon, Aunt Julia. I didn't mean to interrupt."

They stood politely, waiting for her to finish, but she had forgotten what she was going to say. She knew they hadn't wanted her. That they would have stayed home if she had kept out of the room.

ENGAGED AT LAST

She went into the kitchen, made herself a cup of coffee and some cinnamon toast, and ate it, crunching it between her teeth, worrying, wishing she hadn't intruded . . . But why shouldn't she? Did they have anything to say that they were ashamed to have her hear? Did you have to keep out of her own front room on account of Joe Carey?

The movie magazines helped pass an hour. The old cat came in, sat at her feet, and for once she did not shoo him away.

She was still sitting in the kitchen, reading her magazine, yawning, skimming the ads . . . "Gray hair restored to natural . . ." . . . Wrinkled skins made young by new system of nourishing oil" when Val came home.

"I'm so happy—so happy!" she cried. And burst into tears.

"I must be tactful," Aunt Julia thought. "I must be careful to say the right thing. You can easily make them contrary, by seeming too opposed to a thing."

It was Sunday morning. She was getting breakfast. Val was splashing in the bathtub, singing some silly, tuneful thing.

Aunt Julia didn't want to go. She didn't want to have to look at him or talk to him. She was afraid she would break down and say something mean that would make trouble.

But Val insisted.

"Oh, you must come! Because Joe hasn't told his mother, and if I went alone, she might suspect. But if you come with me, why it will be just neighborly—"

AUNT GRIEVES

For a moment Aunt Julia felt really hopeful. Then Joe hadn't told his mother. Didn't intend to tell her just yet. Well, he'd see. He'd find out when he tried to tell her. Hmm . . . a fine time she'd give him. Joe wasn't too strong minded, either. When she began to fuss he'd probably back down, and if he didn't Val's pride would step in and she'd put an end to it. Val wouldn't let Mrs. Carey shriek at her.

"You see, Joe says that our case isn't just like others," Val went right on. "Joe thinks that a couple should always tell their families. I TOLD you the very first minute! But he says that his mother is so sensitive—yes, I know she isn't, she's just mean, but you know how he feels about it. Anyway, Joe says that in his mother's case the thing to do is not to tell her until we're actually married—"

She gulped.

Well, it isn't, she told her conscience. A boy ought to tell his mother. He owes it to her. . . . On dear, he WOULD think of that. Just about the only way he could do it without a scene.

So she had to go to the station with Val, and stand next to Mrs. Carey, and watch her palpitate, and sob, and make a nuisance of herself while strangers looked on solicitously, and spoiled little Vivian cling to her, crying out of sympathy. Val and Joe shook hands decorously and twinkled at each other, full of their secret. Not even unhappy at being separated, secure in planning to be together soon.

FIGHTS TEARS

"Humph!" she had said on the way home. "You'd think Mrs. Carey was doing an Anna Karenina and throw herself under the wheels just because that great big grown boy is going away. If it isn't the most natural thing in the world for a child to grow up and leave! She ought to be ashamed of herself, the way she tried to keep them all tied to her apron strings. Even Betty! You'd think Betty's child was hers, and the husband hasn't got any more rights around the place than a burglar—" And then she thought of herself, losing Val, and she felt she couldn't bear it.

"MARY FAITH" -:- How a Heroine Meets Old Problems in a New Way -:- By BEATRICE BURTON

The second she opened the door, she saw that the thing she dreaded had happened—her desk was covered with packages.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Mary Faith, young and comely fiancee of Kimberly Farrell, handsome blond youth, just out of law school, leaves her position as secretary to the wealthy Mark Nesbit to marry Kim." Mary Faith receives a note from Kim's mother inviting her to dinner. Arriving late, due to Kim's delay, Mary Faith is greeted coolly by Mr. Farrell. Suddenly there is a crash and screams from the kitchen and Kim calls to Mary Faith. Mrs. Farrell had knocked over a pot of coffee, slightly burning herself. The unpleasant attitude of Kim's mother proves to Mary Faith that she does not favor the marriage. Kim startles Mary by suggesting they put it off and finally declares they are "through with each other."

NOW READ ON

CHAPTER 6

"THROUGH with each other?" repeated Mary Faith. And then she said it again. "Through with each other." She sat still, taking it in for a minute or two.

"Well," she said at last, as if she finally realized just what had happened to her. "Well, that's that, isn't it?"

"Aren't you going to say good-bye to me, Mary Faith?"

She [illegible]. There was a [illegible] of [illegible] she [illegible] and walked away [illegible].

"Mary Faith—"

She [illegible] voice. He was [illegible]. He had [illegible] to her [illegible] up [illegible].

"How about your engagement ring, Mary Faith?" he asked in an embarrassed voice. His face was flaming under its tan. "You won't want to wear it now, will you? I promised her I'd get it from you. She had an idea you might make trouble about all this. I told her you wouldn't. I told her that you were wonderful and that you'd understand——"

He [illegible] took it out of her finger. He [illegible] to smile but he looked like a whipped dog.

Just as She Feared

It was half past nine when Mary Faith walked into the office that morning.

Jean Bartlett and the other stenographers looked up at her and smiled when she opened the door. Something in Jean's smile made Mary Faith turn a quick half-frightened glance at the door of her own little room . . . Suppose the girls were giving her an engagement shower. A shower like the one they had given Miss O'Keefe last year just before she left to be married.

"I hope they haven't—Oh, I do hope they haven't," Mary Faith prayed silently.

But the second she opened the door she saw that the thing she feared would happen had happened. Her desk was covered with white packages tied up with satin ribbon and her glass flower vase was filled with long stemmed bride's roses.

She stood gazing at them in agony for a second. Then she closed the door and went into Mr. Mark Nesbit's office without stopping to knock.

He was sitting at his desk doing nothing. His letters [illegible] in a neat stack before him. She saw that they had not been opened. She had always opened his letters for him.

"I'm sorry I'm late," she said, and then, "May I speak to you a moment?"

He nodded.

"Mr. Nesbit, yesterday afternoon I told you I was going to leave you at the end of the month . . . I'd like to stay on if it's all right with you. I've changed my plans."

He glanced up at her.

Called Her Mary Faith

"You mean that you're not going to be married in two weeks?" he asked sharply.

So [illegible] that it had not occurred to her [illegible] the time that this was anything but a business-like question.

"I'm not going to be married at all," she answered quietly. "I've broken my engagement."

"I see." He got up and stood beside the desk, his hands in his pockets. "Everything here goes on just as it usually does, then . . . Well, that's fine, Mary Faith."

He never had called her Mary Faith before.

Everything had always been perfectly business-like and matter-of-fact between them. She had done her work and he had paid her her salary. They had always been "Miss Faith" and "Mr. Nesbit" to each other.

"Please send Miss Bartlett in," he said, as Mary Faith turned to go out of his office. "I spoke to her just now about taking your position when you left . . . I'll tell her you're staying on. That will save you any embarrassment."

Reminiscent of Kim

One of them smelled of gardenia sachet powder. The heavy scent [illegible] nostrils and made her think of the little bunch of gardenias tied with silver ribbon that Kim sent to her last Easter. Once more she could see the pale watery sunlight of Easter Sunday morning when she and Kim had walked [illegible] to church. Kim—There would be something to remind her of him always.

She was picking up the white boxes from her desk when the door of the room flew open and Jean Bartlett came in.

"What's this Mr. Nesbit's been telling me?" she asked, shutting the door behind her. "You're not going to leave after all?"

"Well, what on earth—? What's happened?" asked Jean. "Aren't you going to be married?" Her black eyes were wide with curiosity.

She was one of those frank cheerful, talkative people who have no secrets. She told everything [illegible] about herself to [illegible]. Mary Faith knew all about her love [illegible] her friends and her [illegible] account.

And [illegible] had no secrets of her own. Jean had no qualms about poking her nose into other people's business. But she was lovable and loyal and amusing, and she and Mary Faith had been good friends for four years.

Jean Is Amazed

"No, I'm not going to be married," Mary Faith told her with lips that felt stiff although they were trembling. She looked down at the packages in her hands, and when she looked up again her eyes were shining under a film of tears.

"What happened? Did Handsome change his mind?" asked Jean, who knew him and frankly [illegible] he was the best looking [illegible] she had ever seen.

Mary Faith nodded slowly. Then she came around the desk with the engagement presents in her hands.

"These presents . . . It was mighty nice of the girls to bring them to me," she said. "You give them back to them, Jean, please. I can't—" She shook her head, unable to go on.

Jean fairly snatched the packages from her. Then she seized the bride's roses by their long stems and shook the water from them.

Feel Their Eyes

"Oh, but I'd just like to tell Kim Farrell what I think of him!" she said, bristling all over. "It's too bad you haven't a father or a brother or somebody to go round and give him the best sock on the nose he ever had, Mary Faith. That's what he needs . . . To do a thing like this to you!"

She dropped the roses into the waste basket and picked up the waste basket.

"Buck up, Mary Faith. Don't take it this way!" she went on. "Plenty of mothers have sons, you know. A girl's a fool to break her heart over one man when the world's so full of men . . . You'll find somebody else pretty soon and in six months you'll have forgotten you ever knew Kim Farrell. I know. I've been engaged twice—and I wouldn't shed a tear over the best man alive!"

When she had gone, taking the waste basket of roses and the engagement presents with her, Mary Faith ran downstairs to the rest room where she cried bitterly as she washed the scent of gardenia sachet from her hands.

All day long as she went back and forth in the office she could feel the curious eyes of Jean and Miss Saxe and Miss Kelly upon her. She knew that they were all wondering just what had happened between herself and Kim.

And Miss Gilday, who operated the switchboard, had put through telephone calls from Kim to her every day for almost four years. . . Miss Gilday must be wondering what had happened, too.

"I'm sorry to keep you like this," he said, putting his head in at the door of Mary Faith's small room. "Do you mind staying a little late? I'd like to get my desk cleared tonight."

"I'll be glad to stay," said Mary Faith and she meant it.

His words were like a reprieve to her. All day she had been dreading the evening meal in the River Street house with the Brock girls watching her with their X-ray eyes. A boarding house was so public. You couldn't keep even your sorrow and your humiliation to yourself if you happened to live in one.

Makes Her Heart Ache

It was just half past seven by the time she had finished the last of Mr. Nesbit's letters and had locked her desk for the night. She was getting into her raincoat when he opened the door of her room once more.

"It's raining," he said. "I'm going to drive you home."

"I don't mind the rain, Mr. Nesbit. I often take walks when it's raining. I like to slosh through puddles."

"I'm going to drive you home."

When she went downstairs a few minutes later he was standing in the front doorway, waiting for her. Outside the gray closed car that he drove stood at the curbstone.

They got into it. Mary Faith leaned back against the cushions, her eyes on the wet glitter of the streets as they moved along. The [illegible] back and [illegible] and [illegible] shop windows were like [illegible] into [illegible] the [illegible] fairyland.

A few days before she had lingered before them on her way home from work, enchanted by the lovely things that were on display in them. Enchanted by the snowy [illegible] and [illegible] the Oriental [illegible] and boxes of Chinese [illegible].

Now she turned her eyes away from them. The very sight of them had a certain power to make her heart ache. . . . She was back at the typewriter and the filing cabinet for good.

"It's almost eight o'clock and you haven't had any dinner," Mr. Nesbit suddenly remembered when they were halfway to River Street. "We'll go somewhere and get some."

Mary Faith shook her head quickly. "No, thanks," she answered. "Mrs. Puckett always has Agnes put some dinner away for me when I'm late. And I'm tired. I'd rather go straight home if you don't mind."

Mrs. Puckett's Surmise

The dining room windows were dark when they drove up before Mrs. Puckett's. Mary [illegible] into the house [illegible] that she would [illegible] upstairs [illegible] front door Mrs. Puckett [illegible] from the [illegible].

"Mary Faith! Didn't I just see you drive up in a gray closed car?"

Life seems unbearable to Mary now. Read tomorrow's installment. There is a treat in store for you and all the friends whom you have tipped off about this thrilling story.

A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK

MARKETS — BUSINESS

BUSINESS IS MOVING IN PROSPERITY DIRECTION

By B. C. FORBES

EVIDENCES multiply that trade is picking up modestly.

A growing number of reported increases in working forces in a considerable number of directions, including steel plants, motor factories, textile mills, railway shops, woolen mills, shoe factories, silk and rayon plants, brokerage offices.

Constant Swelling of Gold Stock

The constant swelling of our stock of gold by an average of two to three millions daily — a movement which promises to continue.

The tendering of $7,120,000,000 of bids for offerings of $1,150,000,000 new Treasury securities, reflecting the extraordinary superabundance of funds available for safe investment.

Rush Orders Sent to Factories

The discovery that certain classes of merchandise needed by retailers are not available from wholesalers or jobbers, causing rush orders to be sent to factories and hasty recourse to overtime operations.

Reactions Are Seen as Natural

Cotton precipitately fell $5 a bale on the government's crop estimate of 11,310,000 bales, but revived appreciably before the week ended.

The stock market, after its phenomenal and almost uninterrupted rise, encountered both profit-taking and fresh short selling. Although activity became unusually pronounced, and although transactions sharply increased during spasms of weakness, the undertone was such that bears were afraid to become reckless. The net loss for the week was negligible. Before the close on Saturday, stocks were remanifesting strength.

The long-continued advance in bonds slowed down. Yet practically all the $1,457,000,000 increase in value reported in August on the New York Stock Exchange was retained.

Disappointment was voiced in some quarters over the failure of spectacular business improvement to become visible immediately following Labor Day.

Time Will Tell of Permanency

After the Stock Exchange closed on Saturday, the Steel Corporation announced its first gain in unfilled orders in 17 months. True, the increase was only nominal (3203 tons), but in view of the hesitancy which has characterized buildings, the quietness in the motor industry and the drastic curtailing of expenditures by railroads, the showing can reasonably be viewed as one more straw indicating that the economic wind has changed its direction.

Whether this change will prove permanent the future alone can tell. It can be said, without stretching the facts, that since mid-year the trend on the whole, has been in the right direction and that thus far nothing has occurred to blast hopefulness.

The financial world remains unexcited over politics.

GUESSES LIMIT OF REACTION IN MARKET

By FRANK H. MELOON

One leading daily stock market letter writer sets the probable limit of reaction in the stock market as about 10 per cent from the recent highs. One reason is that a market letter has so far as recorded the possibility of new lows being established, so it can be seen the current confidence is far above the sentiment that widely prevailed before summer recovery set in. Then some people thought we must look for much worse than what really happened. Which recalls the famous line about our worst worries being about things that never take place.

• • •

One big investment banking house declared the opinion that the reaction had probably been about 50 per cent completed. Another said that now much of a reaction was in order, the prospect was problematical.

George H Corliss

George H. Corliss, former Boston advertising manager and an occasional contributor of cheer to our columns, has just finished a 4000-mile trip through some of the Central States, the Middle Atlantic States, Eastern Canadian provinces and New England, and M. Corliss to some: "In some sections of the country greater activity is much in evidence. Many companies are withdrawing old price lists and issuing advanced ones. Salesmen show new courage. Orders in some lines are increasing daily. Consumers rush in to take advantage of low prices in a rising market. Retailers all over the country with bare shelves are trying to place orders for goods at old prices. Wholesalers are caught with no stocks on hand to supply the sudden rush of small orders.

"Manufacturers are daily taking on more help in numerous lines. The work week is being lengthened in some cases. Every supplier of merchandise and materials is caught with the lowest stock on hand in history. Demand is unquestionably surpassing production. Many retail articles have advanced from 10 to 20 per cent and more. Greater optimism prevails all over the South with the rise of cotton prices. Many lines of business are experiencing a more favorable flow of new business. Production is behind new orders.

"Prices are increasing in chain stores, drug stores and grocery stores. Current new business in lumber mills greatly exceeds production. New export orders in some lines are coming in. Stock and bonds are going up. Cold storage stocks of all foods are decreasing. Bank failures have stopped with many previously closed beginning to operate again. Millions of dollars are going into the pockets of the farmer through increased prices for cattle, hogs and other farm products. More millions are finding their way into the pockets of the cotton grower. Everywhere the clouds are lifting in the smaller cities and with the smaller companies.

"Is the depression on the way out? Judge for yourself."

—STATE ST.— Hears:

That the action of the market bears out the conservative estimates of bull possibilities made here last Saturday. Bonds gave way quite easily and it appeared a ceiling of offerings turned back the early session bid for higher stock prices. The sidelines need not be abandoned until somewhere along in mid-week, if then.

Wheat's Position

In the mind of more than one financial observer the thought persists that wheat is holding the key to the near term behavior of the markets. If grain is able to right itself and start up the path to higher prices, sentiment cannot help but take a vigorous swing from hope to hope-shaded.

Insofar as domestic prices are concerned there are the known barriers of surplus and premium above world prices. The first might not prove so troublesome if those who now need, but are unable to buy were in a position to satisfy their wants.

The second problem may be solved by the concerted efforts of various nations to ape the credit expansion policies of the United States. Such success must be hoped for, else this country will either be forced to withdraw as an exporter or reconcile itself to lower grain prices.

This and That

But to treat of the fundamental factors without regard for the technical outlook is to disregard probable immediate price trends. Chicago dispatches indicate that a large hedging position is now outstanding, together with a good-sized speculative short account.

Presumably when the September position is out of the way, the short crowd will find itself in a very vulnerable spot. When the general market is no longer forced to contend with heavy deliveries of cash grain it is just possible it may be kicked higher.

It is worth noting that many economists expect that after a post depression adjustment of a year or two, commodity prices will settle down around current levels for a decade. History and steadily increasing production efficiency support their view.

Raw Hide Prices 100 P. C. Above Low

Raw hide futures are extending their gains. There has been a marked broadening in participation in trading on the New York Hide Exchange, the turnover averaging close to 3,000,000 pounds a day.

Since the commencement of the upswing, around the middle of last June, hide values have climbed well over 100 per cent.

Packer Hide Price Advance Resumed

Packers are reported to have been again rather surprised at the ease with which the advance was secured, and continue to pursue a policy of offering hides very sparingly.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

WEAKNESS in commodities was generally believed to be the main factor in inducing further selling on the big exchange today. Some speculators were also disappointed by the small increase in the Steel Corporation's unfilled August orders in view of the higher forecasts which had been circulated.

Short Interest Is Viewed as Larger

Observers note that several pools have let their stocks react severely on comparatively small volume, which some believe indicates that they are disposed to buy at lower prices than now prevail. Brokers say that the carloading figures had been thoroughly discounted and that much of the street was disappointed in the steel tonnage figures in spite of the fact that the 16 months' decreases turned into an increase.

Telephone Payment Is Seen as Safe

Many in the Street believe that with the improved tone, none will be cut. American Telephone management will maintain the $9 dividend rate in final quarter of the year.

United Aircraft Pool Is Active

United Aircraft pool has been quite active in the current market, according to brokers interested. It is said the company will earn 70 cents a share for 1932.

St. Paul's Net Is Sharply Lowered

New Developments

From now on the business picture and political developments will loom larger on the horizon. This is why considerable significance is attached to today's election in Maine.

Commodities have been largely responsible for the recent market rise, and they will continue to play an important part in future markets, wheat especially.

Here and There

Reports in well-posted circles are that sponsors of United Corp. have received an unlimited order for the stock. This was accompanied by forecasts that Wednesday's power figures would again show a smaller decline from a year ago.

STOCKS REACT 1 TO 8 POINTS IN WALL ST.

New York, Sept. 12—Pivotal shares reacted 1 to more than 8 points in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

U. S. Steel was under pressure from the start, probably reflecting disappointment of speculators who had expected the slight increase in unfilled August tonnage, announced after Saturday's close, to be much larger.

ATCHISON IS WEAK

Atchison was especially weak, soon running off nearly a half dozen points, while Delaware & Hudson was down nearly 8, Lackawanna was off more than 6 points. Atlantic Coast Line was down over 8.

Allied Chemical was down 4.

Shares at the same time down more than 3 points included, Brooklyn Union Gas, J. I. Case, American Can, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeak & Ohio, A. M. Byers, Anaconda, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak. Shares off 2 or more included General Motors, Auburn, General Electric, Columbian Carbon, Columbia Gas, Chrysler, Baltimore & Ohio and American Telephone.

Nickel Plate 6s, due next month, were off 9 points at the opening and receded some 7 more points later. The road's 4½s and 5½s were also under pressure. Other speculative carrier loans joined the selling movement with losses of 2 or more points before mild support appeared.

The weakness of the second-grade transportation group was generally attributed to reports from Washington that the Interstate Commerce Commission favored further restrictions on loans to the carriers.

NICKEL PLATE PLAN

In the case of the nickel plate the agency, it was said, had intimated it would approve cash payment of only 25 per cent on the company's 6s which mature Oct. 1. At the same time the commission approved a relief loan of $6,800,000 to the nickel plate Saturday. It was said that the I. C. C. felt the 6 per cent bondholders should extend 75 per cent of their holdings for a three-year period.

Week-end comment on the steel industry found developments mildly encouraging. The unfilled tonnage figures for U. S. Steel, showing the scant gain of 3293 tons for August, mai have been disappointing to those who were talking a week or two ago of a gain of hundreds of thousands of tons, but it least marked a check to a decline which had endured for 16 months.

"Steel" said ingot production in the past week had averaged 15 to 16 per cent of capacity, up 2 points from the previous week, and found the showing "satisfactory, considering that the industry did not expect a big bulge immediately following the holiday.

Freight car loadings statements for the week ended Sept. 3 was the most favorable in month, with a gain of 21,754 cars, or substantially larger than the average seasonal increase of about 17,400 cars for that period. The decline from the corresponding week of 1931 was a little more than 26 per cent, the, the best comparison since April.

Abitibi Power & Paper Co. is covering operating expenses and taxes and a portion of bond interest, it was declared today by the bondholders committee, in a statement commenting on the recent appointment of receivers for the company.

The committee was formed in June under the chairmanship of Joseph P. Ripley, vice-president of National City Co., to represent holders of the first mortgage 5 per cent bonds due in 1953.

Farr Alpaca Gains, Hires More Workers

Reflecting the improvement in the textile situation stock of Farr Alpaca Co. is now $27 bid against recent sales at $20 per share. The stock sold as low as $5 this year. Its Holyoke plant produces cotton goods, woolen goods, alpaca, mohair, rayon goods and supplies. After being practically closed during the summer the mills have begun to participate in the demand for textile products. Commencing about three weeks ago the rayon business picked up and the mill has been showing improvement each week since then. Additional workers are being added as more looms are being cut in.

The company is in excellent financial shape. At the end of May quick assets amounted to $8,402,648 with current liabilities of only $187,287, giving "net quick" of $8,224,361 or $58.74 per share. Position has not changed materially since the end of May.

ACTIVITY FOR STEELS IS UP

New York, Sept. 12—The week following Labor Day has turned in a two-point rise in steel operating rate, a slight but general expansion of inquiry and bookings, price advances in those scrap grades and districts which have lagged behind the leaders, and structural steel lettings somewhat below the weekly average for the year, states the magazine Steel.

"This showing is satisfactory, considering that the industry did not expect a big bulge immediately following the holiday. Sentiment continues strong, with an increase in the country's steel requirements from now on regarded as certain. But the next two weeks are viewed as critical ones, which must record substantial improvement if recent high expectations are realized.

"Every operating district but one bettered its production in week ended September 10, despite the holiday; the exception was Birmingham, where a 25 per cent rate was maintained. Pittsburgh mills stepped up from 13 per cent to 15 per cent, Chicago from 12 per cent to 13½ per cent, Eastern Pennsylvania from 12½ per cent to 13 per cent, Youngstown from 13 per cent to 20 per cent, Cleveland from 14 per cent to 23 per cent, Buffalo from 11 per cent to 20 per cent. The national average in the week ended September 10 thus was 15-16 per cent. Cleveland and Eastern Pennsylvania operations will expand this week; Buffalo will be off.

New York Central's Assets $71,260,901

New York, Sept. 12 (AP)—New York Central Railroad Co. reports current assets of $71,260,901 as of July 31, compared with $87,332,204 on July 31, 1931. Current liabilities amounted $106,412,152 against $92,542,974. The road's investments totalled $48,106,391 contrasted with $36,018,314 a year ago. These consisted of stocks and bonds of other than affiliated companies.

Seasonal Gains Are Made by Business

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, Sept. 12—In looking for confirmation in fundamental business statistics of the summer enthusiasm in the security markets, Wall Street has again been confronted with the fact that, though speculation is mercurial, business moves like a snail.

The composite commodity price advance, which continued to hearten the bulls, was associated with the same type of thinking that actuated moves in the security markets. As for business itself, it at least showed a capacity to make seasonal gains. Even this would have been unlikely if the panic psychology of winter and early spring had continued.

Activity in coal and apparel has been somewhat better than seasonal. Statistics of electric power output, building contracts and carloadings have also been mildly encouraging. The tiny gain in unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel Corporation, after months of declines, may indicate a change of trend, though when th efigures are adjusted for seasonal variations they are far from conclusive.

In view of the seriousness of the previous stagnation in business, it is not to be expected that the transition will be rapid. The important thing is to capitalize the better sentiment prevailing by taking co-ordinated steps to raise purchasing power and to relieve unemployment.

Youngstown Operations Up 1 Per Cent

Youngstown, O., Sept. 12—Operations of steel mills in this district this week will begin at 21 per cent of capacity, an increase of 1 per cent over the rate in effect at the start of last week and a gain of 2 per cent from last week's average. Measured by ingot output, district operations of Sheet & Tube will be a shade higher at 9 per cent of capacity, against 8 per cent last week, although the company's two open-hearth plants in the Mahoning Valley are likely to remain idle.

Canadian Carloadings Up

Ottawa, Sept. 12—Canadian carloadings for the week ended September 3 totaled 41,396 cars, against 40,826 in the preceding week, a gain of 570 cars, although less than the usual seasonal gain. Grain loadings, contrary to seasonal tendencies, declined 131 cars from the preceding week. Coal loadings increased 673 cars and merchandise gained 240 cars.

Melrose Seeks Financing

COTTON SALES ABOVE OUTPUT

New York, Sept. 12—Sales of carded cotton cloths in August were 282.4 per cent of the month's production at 510,531,000 yards, the largestin any month since comparable figures became available in January, 1928. Production totaled 180,781,000 yards. Billings were 252,623,000 yards, or 139.7 per cent of production.

Unfilled orders increased 113 per cent during the month to 485,860,000 yards, a figure not equaled in any month since March, 1929.

Stocks on hand decreased 25.3 per cent to 209,407,000 yards, a new low. Theprevious low was 239,654,000 yards at the end of February, 1932.

These statistics are compiled from data supplied by 23 groups of manufacturers and selling agents reporting to Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York and Cotton-Textile Institute, Inc. These groups report on more than 300 classifications or constructions of carded cotton cloths and represent the major portion of production of these fabrics in the United States.

AND SO IT GOES

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

A young man whom Sheriff Noble is inclined to think might have been in on sticking up the Johnson Cafe in Mindon about two weeks ago, was caught robbing a store in Arcadia. A crowd of people gathered and were about to grab him, when he yelled out that he had dropped a twenty dollar bill. His would-be captors scrambled for the imaginary $20 bill, and he made good his getaway.

Snappy comebacks, 1932—

YOU TELL 'EM, GIB!

Floorwalkers, bootleggers, barbers, hairdressers,
Factfinding pundits, fast and loose guessers—
Explain the depression.
Industrial giants and glib politicians,
Socialists, Communists, mere statisticians,
Star gazers, preachers and mathematicians—
Diagnose the depression.
Credit buying, some will say.
Put us where we are today.
Other buffle-headed sages
Blame it on high level wages.
Farmers lgically explain
The land's decline, the city's gain.
Competition, greed amuck,
Some say, put us out of luck.
Some think bankers, clever foxes,
Have the dough in safety boxes.
Prohibition, taxes, rent—
Others blame the President.
We've too many guessers and too few of fact-finding pundits who puzzle and bore us
With causes expounded from A unto Z—

Look at Him GO!

This Young Man Uses His Muscles Well. For REAL Success You Must Use the Brain.

EDDIE TOLAN, MARVELOUS COLORED SPRINTER, SETTING A NEW 100-METER RECORD.

Young gentlemen who hope to succeed in some really big way—not merely in athletics—concentrate your attention for a moment on this young negro medical student, setting a new Olympic record of 10 3-5 seconds for the 100-meter sprint.

This young colored man's ability to transform every fraction of muscular and nervous energy into SPEED brought the United States various triumphs in the Olympic games.

Put him where you please, to run, and this young man WINS.

He wins because he possesses the secret of USING ALL THAT HE HAS.

Study the energy, the terrific will-power that this running figure expresses, the body bent forward, far out of balance, so that he would fall on his face except that his feet move more rapidly than the law of gravitation.

It is not printed to urge upon young men the importance of running 100 meters in 10 3-5 seconds or at any other speed.

There was a day when man depended for his life on his speed. That day is past.

There was a day when the transmission of important messages—as in that famous run from Marathon—depended on speed and courage. That day is past, with the telegraph, telephone and radio.

Athletic exercises—racing, swimming—are important because they gratify the ambition of the young. They are especially important because they develop the lungs, supply the blood with oxygen, build up HEALTH, upon which the only thing worth while, THE BRAIN, can do its work.

The moment exercise is pushed to a point where it interferes with mental efficiency it is a detriment. When it is made the main pursuit in life it means a wasted career.

"I shall do what I can with my muscles, develop, within reason, such athletic efficiency as may be in me. But, above all, I shall try to use MY BRAIN as this young man uses his MUSCLES."

Millions drift through life and out of it, never having amounted to anything.

There is not one of them that could not make a real success—a success worth while in proportion to his ability—if he would always have in mind an intense desire and determination to use his thinking power as well as this young colored man uses his muscles, nerves and physical courage.

Anti-Hoarding Scheme

A Baltimore woman has sued a radio company for the return of $190 which, she alleges, was hidden inside the radio which the company repossessed when she failed to pay an installment.

Wow, that's an idea!

Why not develop some sort of method whereby stockings, sugar bowls, tin cans and books containing the hoarders' caches can be repossessed?

That surely would put idle money into circulation, which, according to those who are supposed to know such things, would bring Prosperity from around that elusive corner.

New York Day by Day

Diary of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, Sept. 12—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up betimes and an autographed copy of Princess Der Ling's "Jades and Dragons." And, after breakfasting on a mackerel, to see Clara Walsh, who told of motoring through Gallipolis recently and I felt a longing to go there myself.

All the early afternoon frittering at my task and with my wife to meet Mrs. Pearl S. Buck, authoress from China, then to my dentist, Dr. Campbell. And we talked of days when he, just out of college, opened his little office and I was his third patient.

Dining in the evening at "The Chimney Corner," near Stamford, run by Marseilles, a former acrobat, who has found content away from the fury of the city. Then driving on to Shippan Point to call on the H. T. Websters and home late. And so to bed.

In a roadside cafe a master of ceremonies called upon audience talent. After a little coaxing a silver-haired gentleman, on the other side of the gulf, and suggesting the late Lord Oxford, responded. With his middle-aged and plump wife, he executed a series of whirlwind dances that brought diners to their feet. In the Hammerstein-Victoria days they were billed as The Marvelous Millers, and in mature years express an amazing elan of vitality.

Incidentally, an innovation on the penthouse ledges and Long Island estates was the hot-dog wagon, slightly glorified, and rolled about by the host. The proceeds were contributed to charity. Such wagons were on sale in smart specialty shops along Madison avenue. O, yes, in penthouses a servant is "a house boy."

A Manhattan wag in London recently spent a lonely evening waiting for a guest, lost in a fog or something, for a dinner at Claridge's. Thumbing idly through a phone book, he came upon this entry: King George "., 32 Manor Road, Wallington 2162. He called the number. After a long wait there was a knock at the door. A grand lama in high-plush hat and caparisoned in gold rops was there with a note-book and looking very official. He wanted to know the why of the call. Flustered, the New Yorker pleaded a sudden curiosity. And then, the story goes, in enormous pique, put in a transatlantic call for the White House, asked to talk to President Hoover, and did. Out more than a sum r' $100, he still thinks he's even.

Listen, World!

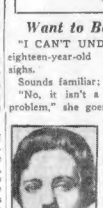
By Elsie Robinson

Want to Be Smooth

"I CAN'T UNDERSTAND my eighteen-year-old daughter," she sighs.

Sounds familiar; doesn't it?

"No, it isn't a 'flaming youth' problem," she goes on, "She isn't really wild, but she has such a hard way that I wonder if strangers realize that. She doesn't care for any of the things which I cared for as a girl. She's everything I was taught not to be.



Elsie Robinson

"That sounds terribly 'old fogey,' doesn't it, Miss Robinson? But I'm only forty, and I pride myself that I have kept up with the times; yet my daughter is a riddle to me. There is nothing feminine about her, and she is as wordly wise as her own father.

"She thinks all my ideas about young girls are a joke, and becomes perfectly furious if I try to shield her from things. All her girl friends are like her, too; more like tough young boys than the sweet young women of my youth. I wish someone could tell me what it's all about!"

Forty and eighteen: only twenty-two years between your youth and hers.

YET MORE HAS HAPPENED TO THE HUMAN RACE WITHIN THOSE TWENTY-TWO YEARS THAN IN THE PRECEDING TWO HUNDRED.

AND THOSE HAPPENINGS HAVE CAUSED A GREATER GAP BETWEEN YOUR TWO GENERATION? THAN THERE WAS IN FIVE GENERATIONS BEFORE YOU.

Almost every condition which affects human life and human behavior has been changed since that birthday in 1892: Automobiles, telephones, aeroplanes, apartment houses, moving picture houses, one-piece bathing suits, silk stockings, make-up compacts, marcels, beach pajamas, votes and jobs and professions for women, athletic meets with feminine competitors—all these things, which played little or no part in your youth, were established in the world by the time your daughter came along.

AND AS A RESULT, IT WOULD BE EASIER FOR YOU TO LIVE BY THE RULES WHICH GOVERNED YOUR GREAT-GREAT GRANDMOTHER'S YOUTH THAN FOR YOUR DAUGHTER TO LIVE BY THE RULES WHICH GOVERNED YOUR YOUTH.

I read an advertisement the other day which should explain your daughter to you. It was released by a famous New York clothing shop and ran, in part, as follows:

"A shop with a staff of prominent girls from twelve leading Eastern colleges to advise 'old girls' and freshmen-to-be on what's what in college clothes. A shop where it doesn't cost much to be smooth—where the sweet, simple and girlish is banished, the two 'collegiate' rejected, the expensive-looking shunned.

"Where the sweet, simple and girlish is banished!" That's the attitude you find so mysterious and maddening in your daughter, isn't it, mother of forty?

What will it buy her to be "simple," if she needs to know all the tricks and all the answers?

They want to be "smooth"; these modern girls. Smooth and subtle and sinewy as snappy young snakes. That's their ideal. And if you can shake yourself out of the sachet, sister, why not admit that it's a GORGEOUS IDEAL?

You wouldn't object to that ideal in a boy. WHY SHOULD YOU OBJECT TO IT IN A GIRL WHO MUST LIVE THE LIFE OF A BOY?

Instead of fretting around, like the proverbial wet hen, why not rejoice with your girl that she can live such a life, and help her live it—and maybe get a little "smooth" yourself?

Just Folks

Friends

When the long race is run
And all the tasks are done,
Men find that peace depends
Not on the goals attained
Or the high fortunes gained,
But on good friends.

Laughter and song and mirth
And the rich joys of earth
No mortal here attend,
Unless with him each day
'Neath sunny skies or gray
Walks a true friend.

Pride, pomp and power of place
Lack that consoling grace
Which soothes and mends
Heartache and sorrow's pain.
Who weeps shall smile again
If he has friends.

Though on a golden throne,
He, who must dwell alone,
Time sadly spends.
All that makes life complete,
All that makes memories sweet,
Comes from our friends.

Whose 'Paper Losses,' Mr. Wilbur?

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

WHEN FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT entered Vermont last week to receive a cordial greeting in that rock-ribbed Republican State, he broke all precedents for generations; since no other Democratic Presidential nominee has entered the commonwealth. Years ago the gallant little band of Democrats in Vermont invited Samuel J. Tilden to visit the State and 'address the Democracy of Vermont." He dallied with excuses until, finally driven to vexation by the persistency of the appeal, he wrote:

"It is impossible for me to leave the city or even my own house at this time; but I shall be very glad to address the Democracy of Vermont in my library any time they can all come."

It would not be possible to crowd into any library the Vermonters who will vote for Roosevelt this year. The farmers of that sturdy commonwealth are suffering intensely along with the farmers everywhere. The enthusiastic greeting given Roosevelt at the State Fair last week is indicative of the feeling.

Foreclosures Hit New High Record

With an uneasy eye upon the farmers of the West, even more than on the home owners of the East, the Hoover Administration gave it out the other day that a moratorium on foreclosure on homes had been asked—for sixty days. It is noteworthy that this is the first indication the Administration apparently has had of the fact that homes have been foreclosed, along with farms, to a greater extent by far during his regime than ever before in American history. Last year there were hundreds of thousands of farms, old homesteads, taken from their owners by foreclosure. For four years the newspapers of the agricultural section have been literally crowded with announcements of foreclosures and sales for taxes. We have seen Western papers so appalling in this way that they should be presented to the Congressional Library for the use of the future historian of economic conditions in America in our time. Through these three or four years nothing has been done to aid the victims of conditions for which they are not responsible.

This sweeping away of homes and farms from their owners is on the increase—and that is bad in the midst of a campaign.

Thus Mr. Hoover has asked a moratorium on foreclosures—not for six months, not for a year, but until the campaign is over. In other words, sixty days. After sixty days the polls will be closed. And after sixty days the foreclosures can go on as far as the Administration is concerned.

* * *

Home-Owners' Situation Grave

Not long ago Mr. Hoover held one of his numerous conferences, none of which has resulted in any definite planning, and urged the homeless to buy homes now. Every man who can should own his home; but the problem of millions today is to save themselves from eviction. Homes cost money—and money is scarce, and, despite the ballyhoo of deception, credit is hard to get. Interested as Mr. Hoover would have himself appear to be in homes for the people, he strangely overlooked then, as he had for more than two years before, the peril of foreclosure.

At the time he was urging people to buy homes, the banking institutions of the country held mortgages on homes and farms to the extent of $12,000,000,000.

It will continue to go on at a merry rate after the election.

* * *

"Moratorium" May Not Be Observed

But even the sixty days' moratorium request does not promise to mean much. An investigation shows that little respect for the moratorium request will be shown by any financial institutions except those banks that are closed. There is nothing to indicate thus far that solvent institutions will give much heed. The Controller of the Currency has instructed the receivers of national banks to suspend foreclosures for sixty days—that is, until after the election. That will measure about the extent of the relief.

"Paper Losses," Mr. Wilbur?

Meanwhile the line of the jobless lengthens; the appeals of welfare organizations for funds to fight what they expect to be the hardest battle against want ever seen this Winter, intensify.

And Secretary Wilbur, a wealthy man, returns from a Western tour, going right through cities teeming with men dispossessed of jobs, and farmlands where the home owners have been dispossessed of their homesteads by the hundreds of thousands, with a cheery announcement that things look good. He finds a better spirit among the suffering, and he puts it in this way:

"Men have taken their paper losses. They find, or a great majority of them find, that they have their cars and their same places of business."

The elevens million out of jobs and denied the right to work have had no paper losses; they have lost everything on which they depended for life—the right to work.

The thirty million additional dependents of these jobless men have not worried about paper losses; these have lost everything they had.

The millions of farmers bankrupt or verging on bankruptcy are not interested in "paper losses"; they are either the victims of foreclosure or are living under its threat.

Mr. Wilbur is thinking in terms of the market-minded; as thinks the Administration.

Imagine going down the breadlines of the cities and saying to the unfortunates: "Just forget your paper losses and cheer up."

But Mr. Wilbur, who thought it fortunate for the children of the jobless to be hungry because it would "strengthen their characters," has no thought of the thirty million farmers, the eleven million jobless, their thirty million dependents. His concern apparently is solely of those who had "paper losses."

* * *

Single Hope for Jobless

But there is one very slight ray of hope for the jobless. Senator Wagner's constant prodding, reinforced by public sentiment, promises to compel Ogden Mills to begin to put the Wagner-Garner bill into operation before October.

Every hour of the delay for fifty days has been a mockery of the needy; delay for another thirty days would be brutality.
